MAKES PROPOSAL TO SECRETARY LANSING TODAY WHICH MAY SETTLE CONTROVERSY. AWAITS PERSIA REPORT

Field Cables Washington That Austria Has No Official Word of Sinking of British Liner in Mediterranean.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Jan. 7.—Count Von Bernsdorff, German ambassador, presented to Secretary Lansing today a proposal to pay indemnity for Americans lost in Lusitania disaster and thereby concluded that controversy, and gave assurance that any German submarine in the Mediterranean sea would not attack noncombatant ships of any character without warning or destroy them without opportunity for noncombatants to reach places of safety.

Washington, Jan. 7.—Still lacking definite information on which to base action on the situation between the United States and the central powers arising from the sinking of British steamer Persia, although the disaster occurred more than a week ago, President Wilson and Secretary Lansing were hopeful today that Ambassador Penfield, at Vienna, would be able to clear up the situation. Word was looked for from the ambassador regarding the foreign office's response to the ambassador's inquiries on the subject.

The Austro-Hungarian government, according to a dispatch received today by the department from Ambassador Penfield at Vienna, secured 21 affidavits.

General Garrels, at Alexandria, Egypt, today advised the state department that he had secured affidavits from twenty-one survivors of the Persia, including Charles H. Grant, an American citizen, and that all the survivors were given and no vessel was sunk.

BRITISH SUBMARINE SUNK; CREW SAVED

Announcement Made That Submersible Was Sunk Off Holland Coast.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, Jan. 7.—The sinking of a British submarine off the coast of Holland was officially announced this morning. The crew were saved. The submarine, the name of which was not given, was sunk yesterday off the coast of Holland, the largest and most modern of the British group. The entire crew, numbering thirty-five, was rescued by the Dutch cruiser, and brought into the Dutch port of Hoofddijk.

DENOUNCE GARDNER FOR SLUR AGAINST GERMAN-AMERICANS

Two Wisconsin Congressmen, Cooper and Stafford, Call Republican Colleague to Task In fiery Speeches.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Jan. 7.—Representative Gardner was vigorously assailed today in the house by two republican congressmen, Stafford and Cooper of Wisconsin, when he made a speech criticizing German-Americans and the German nation.

The remarks we have just heard were an insult to the German-American community in this country, declared Mr. Cooper, who is a ranking member of foreign affairs committee.

Stafford Assailed Gardner.

On Mr. Gardner's demand for regular order of business Mr. Cooper said down. He had scarcely taken his seat when Mr. Stafford gained the floor. In an impassioned address, he declared that Gardner was "more British than American," and that for his remarks "when every member should weigh his words carefully," and strongly defended German-Americans.

Mr. Stafford took particular exception to declaration that German-Americans were destroying the ammunition factories with their gold and dynamite.

"Those charges cannot be made against 8,000,000 German-Americans who are in this country," he declared. "I am not advocating the German cause, but I am pointing out that in my own district munition factories are running daily without interference. I charge which is unworthy of any man."

Mr. Gardner left the house just as Mr. Stafford began.

GARDNER MAKES SPEECH

Representative Gardner, republican, made a long, pointed speech in the house today on the war conditions involving the United States. He approved the administration's stand that it would be unneutral to embargo war munitions and declared that peace in Europe now would be inconclusive and would mean another war. He assailed the pacifists, the hypocrites and the cotton interests.

It is understood Collector Malone's neutrality investigators report that there were no Italian gun runners on board and that the members of the crew were regularly so. The collector's opinion is understood to be that the presence of the guns had not altered the Verdi's character of a merchantman. His opinion, however, is not binding on the state department, which is understood to look with disfavor on any merchant ship entering American ports with armament.

It has been indicated that the department will ask the Italian government to have the guns removed before the Verdi sails.

OSHKOSH CLERKS GET TERM IN GREEN BAY

Two Young Men Misrepresented Business Books and Obtained Over Three Thousand Dollars.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Oshkosh, Jan. 7.—Following the withdrawal of previous pleas of not guilty and entering a plea of guilty to charges of having embezzled considerable money from the Wisconsin Traction, Light, Heat & Power company, Archie W. Benjamin and Edward J. Neenan were sentenced in municipal court here today to two years in the state reformatory at Green Bay. It was charged in the amended information that Benjamin embezzled $1,800 and the amount taken by Neenan was $2,036. Benjamin was employed by the company as cashier at its Neenah office, and Neenan was employed as a conductor at Neenah and Oshkosh. The amount of their thefts could easily have brought them sentences in the state's prison, but the court took into consideration the fact that they have never been in court before and their previous good character.

The way the young men operated was to fix up the book to show the patrons of the company had not paid the bills when in reality the bills had been paid.

REPORT ON LINER'S HAVING TWO GUNS RECEIVED TODAY

Indicated That State Department Will Ask Italian Government to Remove Guns From the Ship.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Jan. 7.—Collector of Port Malone's report on the Italian liner Giuseppe Verdi, which arrived in New York yesterday with two guns mounted, was received today by the treasury department and forwarded to the state department without being made public.

It is understood Collector Malone's neutrality investigators report that there were no Italian gun runners on board and that the members of the crew were regularly so. The collector's opinion is understood to be that the presence of the guns had not altered the Verdi's character of a merchantman. FEARED THE EDITORS' BLUE PENCIL SO TURNED TO CRIMES OF BURGLARY

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

San Francisco, Jan. 7.—Poet, playwright and author by day; burglar by night—that's how Frederick Glanz described himself. Under a lot of hard-hearted editors he blames the combination. He didn't have the nerve to face the blue pencil, after several rejections, but he had the nerve to turn burglar.

SAFE BLOWN OPEN IN ST. PAUL AND YEGGMEN ESCAPE

Skilled Cracksmen Open Huge Safe and Make Away With Loot Which May Amount to a Million Dollars.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

St. Paul, Jan. 7.—From six hundred dollars to five thousand dollars in cash, and internal revenue stamps, which may total one million dollars in value, were stolen from the office of the internal revenue collector in the old postoffice building last night when the vault door was blown open. The robbery was discovered today by D. C. Ryval, a janitor.

Immediately upon discovery of the robbery, E. J. Lynch, revenue collector, instigated an investigation and the police departments of St. Paul and Minneapolis, with federal agents, started in the search for the robbers. Mr. Lynch also went to work to determine the exact amount in cash and stamps that had been obtained. A close inspection of the wrecked vault showed that the work had evidently been done by an expert. But one small hole had been bored in the wall of the vault to admit the explosive. The door was blown out completely. Collector Lynch, who is a brother of Fred B. Lynch, democratic national committeeman for Minnesota, stated that the robbers carefully left unrecognizable stamps and had left unrecognizable stamps in large amounts. Each point checked by the federal agents and police in their investigation indicates that the robbery was once ready by the solid and executed, and it was committed by individuals well informed.

BESSARABIAN DRIVE SUCCESS FOR SLAVS IS LONDON OPINION

Considered Most Important Achievement of Russian Armies Since Advance into Carpathians.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

London, Jan. 7.—According to official advices from Vienna, the fighting on the eastern front has decreased in violence, the Russians having ceased to attack with vigor between the Prut and the Bessarabian frontier. The only gains officially announced for the Russians yesterday was at Czartorysk, where it is said the Austrians were driven from the cemetery.

Any advance in this region will threaten Koval, one of the strongest Austro-German positions. It is believed that even though no further gain should be made, Russia's forces have attained a position which will give the nation a degree of power in Balkan affairs it has not had since its army was driven back from the Carpathians.

WREST THREE FROM DEATH ON SUPERIOR

Northern Fishermen Caught In Ice Are Rescued From Floes In Half Frozen Condition.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Duluth, Jan. 7.—Three fishermen near death in their frozen-in skiffs on Horseshoe Bay, south shore of Lake Superior, were rescued yesterday by Captain W. J. Johnson of the tug Crescent. He reported the rescues today.

Two rescues were made. In the first instance the fisherman was found with net entangled and unable to escape from his predicament because of ice that had formed. He was towed by tug to a fishing station on the bay and revived. Near the mouth of the Brule river, two men whose need of rescue was more acute, were found. Their skiffs also were entangled in frozen nets and the men themselves lay unconscious. They were taken to the tug and thawed out and later were taken ashore. At 7 a. m. today the street thermometer still showed 20 degrees below zero.

SAY CAPTAIN DECLINED TO CALL FOR AID

THESSALONIK'S PASSENGERS ARRIVED IN NEW YORK DESCRIBE HARSHIPS OF VOYAGE.

BUFFETED BY STORMS

Rough Seas and Gales Cause Loss in Ship.—Food Supply Gives Out.—Appeals to Officers Unheeded.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York, Jan. 7.—The 177 passengers who were forced to abandon the sinking steamship Thessaloniki at sea, arrived here today on the steamship Patria of the same line, and gave a vivid description of the hardships they suffered during the few weeks that the vessel was battered by a series of terrific gales.

On December 25, passengers said the supply of meat on the steamer was exhausted, only a few gallons of water were left, and officers began to portion out short rations.

Vessel Springs Leak.

The Thessaloniki first sprang a leak on December 21, when she entered a hurricane which raged for twelve hours. The boiler and engine rooms were partly flooded and the steamer sent out for assistance. After the hurricanes the flooded portions of the ship were pumped out and the steamer proceeded on her voyage.

Rough seas and gales were encountered from Dec. 21 to Dec. 26, when the Thessaloniki ran into a ninety mile hurricane, which lasted for twenty-four hours. Many of the passengers and crew feared the steamer was sinking and would arrive in New York and the boiler and engine rooms and coal bunkers rapidly filled with water.

It was then that the ship sent out numerous S. O. S. calls, which were heard by several steamers. The Florizel was the first to reach the disabled vessel and offered to take off the passengers and crew and carry them to Bermuda. Captain Goulardis, who was making his first voyage as a master, declined this offer. The Florizel stood by until the Patria came to sight. The Thessaloniki's passengers would have been forced to leave all of their baggage and personal belongings on the disabled vessel.

Takes Ship in Tow.

After the transfer the Patria shot a line to the Thessaloniki and took her sister ship in tow on Jan. 1. The Patria arrived in New York on Jan. 6 and early the following morning the tow line parted. That afternoon the Patria succeeded in getting another line to the Thessaloniki, but the cable broke for a second time early in the morning of January 7 and the Thessaloniki was driven rapidly to the southeast before a terrific hurricane accompanied by a blinding snowstorm.

Owing to the Thessaloniki's engine being stopped by the water in the ship's hold, she was only able to send out infrequent wireless calls which covered a small area around the ship. Captain Goulardis said he had been unable to make sound observations by reason of the almost continuous rain. It was for this reason, he added, that he was unable to receive messages regarding the position of his vessel.

Refused to Call Aid.

"The Thessaloniki left Tientsin, November 26. On December 21 the first severe storm came up and the first passengers were taken on board. Anything amiss was when the snow was ordered below to work on something that had gone wrong. Many passengers became alarmed and on December 22, when the Italian liner Stamboulia was sighted, many of them went to the captain and asked that they be transferred. He assured them that everything was all right and that they would arrive in New York on time. That storm lasted more than twelve hours.

On December 26 another storm came up. One of the life boats was carried away. Several passengers and members of the crew were killed and the captain and asked that wireless calls for aid be sent out. He was indignant, saying that he was running the ship and knew his business and refused to send out any call.

Later all officers and crew, except first engineer and two sailors, demanded that the captain send out messages. He refused, and the first officer then sent out the calls.

"When the Florizel came in sight we were living on short rations and had a cup of water a day. We had no meat for two weeks, although there were vegetables and bread."

"When the Patria came up on December 21, the captain and a few brought back ten casks of water and a supply of meat. All this time the vessel was leaking badly, but the captain seemed determined to take his ship and passengers to New York."

"On New Year's day, however, he gave up hope and the passengers were transferred to the Patria."

LINE CITY KICKS AT COUNTY TAXES FOR ROAD SYSTEM

Line City Councilmen have passed a resolution to withhold from payment to the county treasurer $7,000 payment into County Treasury—Case to Court.

Following the lead instigated a short time ago by the city of Madison, the common council of Beloit, at its meeting this week ordered withheld from payment to the county treasurer $7,000, the amount of state and federal money levied against the city of Beloit. Beloit, like Madison, alleges that the state and highway tax levies for the purpose of paying for the construction of the highway system, are unconstitutional and have opened their appeal to the supreme court by ordering their city treasurers to withhold the amount in question.

Incidentally, following the orders of the Line City council, the $7,354.27 is to remain in the city treasury until the supreme court has ruled on the legality of the law. Madison city money will be tied up in a similar way.

The breaches opened by the two cities is watched with interest throughout Wisconsin. Not only is the result of the supreme court's action awaited, but interested cities and counties are vitally concerned in what the court will do when the time arrives whereby the city must pay the tax levy or suffer penalty. This is on the first Monday in March. If the levy is not paid on that date and the city is not in default, the city of the county treasurer, he can assess a penalty of ten per cent. for damages and a similar sum for interest.

Madison and Beloit jointly are carrying the fight to the supreme court. At the present they contemplate urging the court to act on the matter immediately to eliminate any delay in road work in Rock and Dane counties during the coming highway building season.

Committee members going over accounts at the court house today in preparation for the coming January meeting of the county supervisors on Tuesday, Jan. 11, had various opinions relative to the effect of the move by the highway building law for the coming year. They were really no definite decisions, but speculation was rife. Several seemed to think that the action would tend to tie up the entire work of the season. Others contended that perhaps some part of the roadwork would be necessary to be stopped.

One of the features of the present law is that any town board in Rock county can force Beloit to assist in its improvement. At the same time, they say that if the town board votes in favor of improvement under the law in question, the county board is forced to make the necessary appropriation. Then Beloit must pay its share to the county treasury without any other benefit of the tax levy against its property owners. Thus, Beloit contends that they are paying taxes for their own city for local improvements, they are also taxing themselves for improvements for which they receive no benefit. The money is used in such parts of the county to be of no direct aid to the city.

It is to the validity of such a law that the supreme court must decide. Its decision will not only settle the fate of thousands of dollars of state and county road taxes levied this year, but vast amounts paid in former years.

DEATH ANGEL CALLS MRS. ERNEST CLEMONS

Succumbs to Pneumonia Last Evening at Home on Fourth Avenue.

Funeral is Tomorrow.

Mrs. Ernest E. Clemons passed away at the family home at 208 Fourth avenue yesterday afternoon, a few minutes before five o'clock. For the past four or five days she had been hovering between life and death. Her husband, who had been hovering between life and death for the past eight or ten days, suffered from pneumonia. She was thirty-two years of age.

A large number of friends and acquaintances today are mourning her demise, offering condolence to the members of her bereaved family. Mrs. Clemons hoped for recovery to the last and with a marvelous Christian attitude calmly awaited the call of death.

Mrs. Clemons was born at Slough-ton, Feb. 8, 1884. Her maiden name was Martha Laella Nelson. She was united in marriage to Ernest E. Clemons on Oct. 28, 1908. She is survived by two daughters, Coral L., aged four years, and Virginia Gale, aged one year, and by the husband, her mother, Mrs. Charles Nelson of Slough-ton; two sisters, Mrs. Henry Olson of Seattle, and by two brothers, Elmer and Arthur Nelson of Elkhart, Ind.

The deceased was a member of the First Congregational church of this city. Having joined that congregation on March 7, 1914, she was a regular attendant. Her funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the home at 208 Fourth avenue. The Rev. Charles B. Ewing will officiate. The remains will be laid to rest in Oak Hill cemetery.

CIVIL WAR VETERAN DIES AT SHOPIERE

A. F. Lee, One of First to Enlist and Who Was in Seventeen Battles, Dies at Daughter's Home.

A. F. Lee, who lived in Janesville since 1881 with the exception of the period of the civil war, and during the past two years, who he made his home with his daughter, Mrs. James Monroe at Shopiere, passed away yesterday afternoon at the advanced age of seventy-eight years.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at Shopiere at 10 o'clock and after the funeral the remains will be brought to Janesville and laid to rest in Oak Hill cemetery. Comrades of William H. Sargent Post, No. 23, Grand Army of the Republic, are to meet the remains at the funeral and accompany them to the cemetery and attend the services in the chapel at one o'clock.

Mr. Lee was among the first of Janesville youths to respond to President Lincoln's call to arms in the memorial April of '61. His career during the rebellion relates as novel and as interesting as that of any second lieutenant of Co. B, 2nd Wis. Infantry, that famous fighting unit among many from the Badger state, who participated in the battle of Bull Run, the first real clash between the armies of Jeff Davis, president of the Confederacy, and of the United States. Altogether he saw service in seven campaigns, and was at Gettysburg, where he was injured by a bullet in the leg, but the wounds were so slight and seasoned by four years of campaigning that he scarcely noticed his injury.

Mr. Lee was a native of New York state and was born Nov. 28, 1837. He came to Janesville in 1881. He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Monroe of Shopiere, and one brother, Lee of this city, and by three grand-children.

MRS. JAMES FLAHERTY IS CALLED BY DEATH

Passed Away Last Evening at Home on North Jackson Street Following Short Illness.

Mrs. Elizabeth Flaherty, the wife of James Flaherty, the baker, living at 11 North Jackson street, passed away about 8:30 o'clock last evening in her sixty-third year. Pneumonia was the cause of the demise. Mrs. Flaherty suffered with a gripe for several days of New Year's week, and on Sunday this illness developed into pneumonia.

Elizabeth Flaherty was born December 6, 1852, at Lowell, Mass. As girl of eight she came to Wisconsin and Janesville with her parents. Since that time she has always been a resident of the city.

Thirty-eight years ago she was united in marriage to James Flaherty. Surviving are the husband, one daughter, Mrs. John Geary, of the lovers of Rock and one son, Walter Flaherty, of Madison, and two brothers, Frank and William Flaherty, of Janesville.

The funeral will be held from St. Patrick's Catholic church at nine o'clock on Saturday morning. The Rev. Father William Mahoney will read the funeral mass. The body will be laid to rest in Mt. Olivet cemetery.

WELL KNOWN FARMER IS CALLED BY MAKER

Anton M. Huie, Who Has Lived in County Twenty-Eight Years, Succumbs This Morning.

Anton M. Huie, for nearly thirty years a prominent farmer of Rock county, passed away this morning about 7:30 o'clock at his home about six miles north of Janesville, on the River road. Mr. Huie had been hovering between life and death for the previous forty-eight hours and his passing away was not unexpected. He had been sick over a period of three months and his demise is a great shock to his wife, who nursed and cared for him during this time. His death was very peaceful.

Anton Huie was born in Ontario county, New York state, in the year of 1850. He was the son of four years his parents moved west to Wisconsin. A portion of his life had been spent in Dane county.

He is survived by the widow and one son, Paul Huie, who lives at home, and by three sisters, Mrs. Francis Ketchum of New York City, Mrs. M. J. Ketchum of California and Mrs. Ida Paris of St. Paul, and by three brothers, O. L. Huie of Florida and W. J. Huie of Fulton, N. Y.

The funeral will be held on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Huie, who has brooked down under the strain she has undergone for the past three months, the services will be private. The remains are to be buried in Oak Hill cemetery here and services are to be held in the chapel at 2:30 o'clock at which time Mr. Huie's friends may attend and say their final good-byes. The Rev. George Edwin Pearson, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of this city, will officiate.

THURSDAY'S MARKET.

Chicago, Jan. 7.—Considering a record-breaking hot run this week for the winter, the market has been unusually good.

There has been a continuous advance in swine values since Dec. 23, low second tier being higher than that date. Best reached $7.25.

With Sundays and holidays out, receipts of hogs since the close of November have averaged 46,700 daily, or a total of 1,410,000, being a weekly average of 279,200.

Lamb values scored another 25c advance yesterday, best selling at $10.50, or $1.25 above last week's average, and higher than a year ago. Bulk of sales are taking $11 for the near future.

Average price of hogs at Chicago was $7.02, against $6.75 Wednesday, $6.65 a week ago, $6.11 two weeks ago, $7.16 a year ago and $6.18 two years ago.

CATTLE RUMORS DECREASE.

Yesterday's cattle receipts were estimated early at 9,000 and later at 10,000. The market strengthened after a week's decline. Bulk of beef steers, calves weak. Quotations:

ALUMNI WILL BATTLE WITH HIGHS TONIGHT

High School Basketball Team Will Contest Against Alumni in High Gym Tonight.

Tonight at the high school gymnasium the high school basketball team will play their annual game with the alumni of the school. This always makes an interesting contest, as the old grads are former high school basketball stars and always give the school team a hard game. Tonight the lineup for the alumni will be Stewart, a member of last year's squad, Koch, Edwyn Jones and Mout, and possibly a few other former students.

BELOIT ALLEGED FORGERY CASE SET FOR SATURDAY

District Attorney S. G. Dunwiddie appeared for the state in an action against John H. Hopper, of Beloit, charged with forging the name of John H. Hopper.

The case was set for examination Saturday morning.

The charge is one of the first made in the state in a decade and a rural mail carrier on route number one Wednesday. The accident happened while on the Macdonald road, about two and a half miles northwest of the city. The car was completely demolished by the flames and is a total loss.

In addition to other honors acquired during the year, the Detroit outfield drove the prize for having been on the job more of the time than that of any other club in the American League. Of the 156 games played by Detroit, Cobb and Crawford participated in them all, while Trach missed only four. No wonder Hughes Jennings considered Jacobson excess baggage and let him go to the Browns. The Boston triumvirate, Speaker, Lewis and Hooper, missed thirteen games.

Some Classy Athletes On the All-American Track Team

The selection of an All-American track team is not so difficult a task as the picking of an All-American football eleven. The track expert has definite records to guide his selection, while the football expert must depend upon his own judgment. There will not be many to argue, therefore, with the accompanying selection of candidates for the All-American track squad.

Still there may be a surprise that Joe Loomis is picked for the best 100-yard sprinter in preference to Howard Drew. Loomis is given the position not only because of his high-class performance, but also his consistency. In the Central A. A. U. championships he did 9.45 seconds, and against the pick of America at San Francisco he won in the same splendid time.

There was not a consistently high-class man in the 220-yard dash. Drew, Morse of Brooklyn, Smith of Michigan, Meyer of New York and West of Chicago, were all good for better than twenty-two seconds. But with Drew uncertain and the others not exceptionally fast, the honor is given to Morse of Brooklyn, who cleaned up most of the best men in the east and won the event at San Francisco in 21.5 seconds.

Meredith a Great Athlete. J. E. Meredith of the University of Pennsylvania is picked for the 440-yard dash by unanimous consent. Meredith won virtually every scratch race in which he started, equalled the intercollegiate record of forty-eight seconds, and with a slight wind at his back also equalled the world's straight-away record of forty-seven seconds.

Passing on to the half mile Meredith also deserves first place here, although he did not run the event at San Francisco. Meredith has a record of 1:52.4, which he made at Stockholm in 1912. He proved that he had lost none of his marvelous speed when after winning the quarter mile in the I. C. A. A. U. championships in forty-eight seconds, he beat a fresh field of men in the half mile in 1:54.2-5.

It is not so easy to decide the merits of Norbert Taber, the former Brown star, and Ray of Chicago for the mile. Taber is the holder of the world's paced one-mile record of 4:12.3-5, a performance he made at Boston last summer. Ray, however, beat him at San Francisco, and in addition has to his credit a 5:16.1-5 mile run previously at Chicago. The place is given to Taber for the reason that he ran three races during the summer under 4:30 and in the Eastern A. A. U. tryouts did a mile in 4:15.3-5. Ray deserves to rank second.

Two-mile to Cornell Man. The two-mile run did not figure much in A. A. U. meets, and the honor in this event is given to D. F. Potter of Cornell, the eastern intercollegiate champion. Potter beat him at the new American record had he realized how strong he was. As it was he did 9:27.1-5 and ran his second mile faster than his first.

In the five and ten-mile runs there is no one in the same class with Kolehmainen when the latter is at his best. Picking up the hurdles is fast of consistency centers strongly into calculation. In the 120-yard event Fred Kelly of the University of Southern California, and Robert Simpson of the University of Missouri are the leading candidates. Both did fifteen seconds during the year. But they met twice and each time Kelly was the winner. Kelly won the event at San Francisco, but he was disqualified for knocking down four hurdles. However he was the most consistent hurdler of the year. First place in the low hurdles is given to Ferguson in spite of the fact that he did not win the I. C. A. A. U. championship. Undoubtedly he would have won it had he not fallen in his heat. Bill Meakin of the Boston A. A. U. and Harvey was the best quarter-mile hurdler in the country and was not beaten during the season.

Consistency in performance again determined first place in the running high jump, which is given to W. V. Richards of Cornell. It is true that Richards was beaten at San Francisco by Horine, the former Leland Stanford star, and by Wesley Oler of Yale in the I. C. A. A. U. games. But Richards beat Oler in two out of three important meets, establishing an average of 6 feet 4.1-6 inches for each performance.

Worthington Great Jumper. The most consistent broad jumper that America has seen since the days of Kraenzlein was H. T. Worthington of Cornell. He was the eastern I. C. A. A. U. champion with 28 feet 9.4 inches, and he was the A. A. U. champion at 23 feet 10 inches. What made Worthington so wonderful was that he could jump the Centav A. without fouling. In the I. C. A. A. U. meet he did not foul once in his twelve jumps, and five of them were better than 28 feet.

Put Ryan, who holds the world record for the hammer throw, was easily the best of the year, though Lee Talbot, the former Cornell star, and Bailey of the University of Maine were not far behind him.

A new champion appears in the shot put in the person of A. Mucks of the University of Wisconsin. Mucks was the winner of the western college meet and repeated in the Centav A. U. and the National A. A. U. championships. At San Francisco he heaved the leaden ball 48 feet 11.2 inches, and thus becomes third in the world. Although America has seen, although not breaking the world's record, Mucks was likewise the best discus thrower of the year. G. Bronder must be ranked first in the javelin throw.

Lee Talbot, one of the best all-around weight men the country has produced, surprised the athletic world by beating Pat Ryan in the fifty-six pound weight.

This month we will have for delivery, a small amount of Wisconsin State Land Mortgage Bonds which are exempt from all taxation in Wisconsin including the State Income Tax.

In these bonds are found all the advantages and safety which characterizes the best farm loans without the inconvenience which the ordinary farm loan entails.

These bonds are issued under the authority and approval of the Banking Department of the state of Wisconsin, are registrable as to principal. They are legal investments for Savings Banks, Trust Companies, or other financial institutions; also for Trustees, Executors, Administrators, or other custodians of public or private funds.

We offer these five per cent bonds at par and accrued interest in denominations of $100, $500, and $1000.

For all details in regard to these bonds including a synopsis of the law under which the bonds are issued, the application for loan, and the appraisal of property, report of appraisers, approval of the committee on loans, the inspector's report, etc., write Investment Department, and ask for Circular 2.

for a year should not lessen his value as a manager. Gleason was one of the wisest players that ever was in the game, and he has been of great value to managers like Billy Murray and Jimmy Callahan, whom he served as first lieutenant for years.

Frank Kramer of Newark retained his title of sprint king in the cycle world during 1915. This veteran again proved that he is the best bicycle rider at short distances in the world. At the Newark velodrome he defeated stars from all parts of the world on many occasions and won the national championship in rather easy fashion.

THE FLAVOR OF "SPEAR HEAD" IS UNIQUE

A Chew That Has Been Famous for a Third of a Century

HAS THE RICH RED BURLEY TASTE!

Chewing is the only way to get the rich taste of the tobacco leaf. And the only form of tobacco in which you get the leaf as Nature made it is the plug form.

A chew of Spear Head plug tobacco has a wonderful flavor such as you never did and never will taste in any other tobacco.

That Spear Head flavor is unique, mellow, fruity, everlastingly delicious and satisfying.

Spear Head has been famous for a third of a century as the richest, tastiest of chews.

It's made of sun-ripened red Burley. And it's produced by the most modern methods, which develop the luscious flavor of the leaf to the supreme degree.

It is safeguarded at every step in its making. The factory is clean and sanitary—the processes are pure-food processes.

When the choice red Burley has been pressed into mellow, sweet Spear Head plugs you have a chew that simply can't be equalled.

Spear Head is the high-quality chew of the world.

Try Spear Head—you'll never again be satisfied with any other chew. 15c and 10c cuts.

SOBER DELIBERATION.

This is a time for sober deliberation on the part of congress. They must not act hastily lest their thoughts be misconstrued by foreign nations. They must not repudiate the acts of our president, even though they differ with him in thought and action. His has been a trying position this past eighteen months and it would not help matters to have it sent forth broadcast that the American people were not united in spirit behind our physical representative. It is the turning of the crossroads and the United States can not afford to make any mistakes lest it land in the hands of a man that devastates all Europe. Our sympathies may be for this cause or the other, but as a composite people, as the melting pot of the world, we must not let our sympathies run away with our better judgment. Cool heads must work their best that no mistakes are made during the opening session of the present congress.

BROKEN RESOLUTIONS.

One of the stock jokes of January is the number of men who swear off January 1 on bad habits, and then in a few weeks drop back to their old ways.

It is one thing to make a good resolution, at home with your wife looking at you. Also mother's picture over the mantle. Quite another, when out with the "boys" at 1 a. m.

Yet a man who is to command others in life must have some command over himself. If he can not stick to a resolution in a few weeks, he will hardly be able to make a hero do his will in any business enterprise.

A man who expects to do large things must be impervious to ridicule. The people who envy his success will always find his ideas absurd. Hence it is excellent practice to make and keep a resolution in the face of the jeers of one's friends. After you find you can do it, you have an excuse for quitting if it seems best. But usually the resolution proves permanently useful.

New Year's resolutions are said to be out of fashion. Perhaps that is because, one day a year for now beginnings is so inadequate. Every day in the year ought to bring some new purpose and keener hope.

AMATEUR DRAMATICS.

Among the pursuits that occupy the long winter evenings, is the rehearsal and production of amateur dramatics. Churches, fraternal lodges, charity and civic entertainers, are all doing it with a popular cast it is a pretty sure way of making money for good causes. The friends of the performers will enjoy the play expenses, while the general public will assure a handsome profit.

It is difficult to find good short plays suited for amateur work. Many of these pieces require elaborate stage and scenic effects. Others are sensational, melodramatic or "light".

A type of amateur performance that has been done to death is the so-called "kiss" play, making fun of the unworldly manners of the rural districts. It is well to remember that there is often truth in the awkwardness and clownishness in great cities as in any country village.

It is not possible to amuse the public indefinitely by the sight of bewildered farmers clumping around the stage with their trousers tucked in their boots, and saying, "Swan," and "Eddie," bad grammar and rustic manners if handled by clever comedians may possibly still be amusing. But as a rule the motive is played out and does not draw.

The production of amateur plays is a valuable experience for the players, apart from the financial results secured for good causes. In schools and college settlements dramatics are considered to have high educational value, and are given prominence as a part of class program. Stage work develops self-possession, facial expression, and ease of motion and speech. The players always need a good trainer, and with good coaching they can find few more useful occupations for spare time.

EPHANY.

The holiday season is over. Christmas has come and gone. The new year has been ushered in with pomp and glory. Twelfth night has past and the Lord of Misrule ends his reign for sober consideration of the year to come. Way back when we first began to count the Christian years, back when the "Habe" lay in the manger at Bethlehem, swaddled in cloths, there came out of the East "three wise men" to lay their offerings at the cradle of the infant Jesus. Gold, frankincense and myrrh—three precious gifts that the "East" brought to the "Lord of the World."

They traveled by night and slept by day. For at night the wonderful star that shone in the sky lead them to the cradle of the Saviour. So they came to Jerusalem, to the humble manger where lay the child of the House of David, who was one day to die upon the Cross that our sins might be forgiven.

This was the twelfth night. Twelve days after his birth. And so the day came to be known as the "Feast of Lights," and last night, all over the civilized world, and perhaps in some of the trenches of Europe, candles sputtered and glimmered in commemoration of this visit of the Wise Men of the East. It marked the end of the holiday season. The close of the season of rejoicing and sober consideration of the future now comes.

Epiphany is the church name for the day, but the earlier of our English ancestors called it "Little Christmas." On this night all the holly wreaths, the remains of the Christmas tree, the last of the Yule log were burned in the open fireplace and the end of the Christmas festivities came. The Lord of Misrule, who had governed his unruly subjects during the holiday season, ended his sway and the last of the Christmas feasts were held. The church holds it far more solemn and special services were said in various holy edifices throughout the world.

But the holiday season is past. We are now well entered upon the new year. We must consider the future and look to the coming days. It behooves all to pay close attention to what is happening and to their own personal end. It is a time for consideration and thought.

MID-WINTER LABOR.

Labor conditions in winter create some peculiar problems in the United States. Skilled labor is rarely unemployed for any length of time. But there is always a large class of seasonal laborers for whom winter brings little odd jobs and often not these.

The great grain and other crops of this country keep an enormous number of men busy through the summer months for whom there is little or no work in winter. Another great army of men is released by the stoppage of highway work, construction jobs, etc. The condition of these men and their families through the winter is often pitiful.

Summer is the cheapest time to live. In the farming districts great quantities of vegetables and fruits can be had for low prices. The family chicken yard is a great source of dependence until the short days when the hens go on strike. In cold climates it is pathetic to see the high prices the poor have to pay for fuel. The least money pays the highest prices, through his inability to buy in quantities. Winter brings the seasonal worker up against the most costly living conditions with only odd jobs to depend on.

The only radical remedy is for the seasonal worker to learn some skilled trade which will make his service desirable the year around. This is often impossible because of physical weaknesses or other incapacity unfitting men for the strains and tasks of indoor mechanical work. If there was no labor reserve to draw from, the question would arise as to how the great farm staples of the country could ever be harvested.

People who have work of any kind to be done must be performed in winter would render a public service by having it done at that time when unskilled labor is less well employed than usual. Often they subject themselves to annoying postponements by putting off repairs and improvements until the busy season comes. The equalization of the demand for labor would do a great deal to relieve conditions of distress.

The tramp of heavy feet which one hears about now, is not a regiment of the new Continental army, but merely the Ladies' auxiliary to some secret order rehearsing to exemplify the work.

The people who would just as soon buy household supplies at top prices aren't taking any time to read about the bargains advertised in our columns.

From the number of people who still start at how to keep a diary, it is evident that the doings of the first two weeks in January will be well recorded.

There is much discussion about the evils of college sport, particularly the tendency of the professors to impose scholastic requirements on members of the team.

Congress is preparing for a historic debate on preparedness, and senatorial courtesy will require an orator to talk at least nineteen hours.

Why is the navy still complaining of lack of shells, when there is so much peanut policies at Washington?

Tripping daintily along the crowded thoroughfare, she suddenly hesitated, halted, stopped, and held a hand up to her heart.

"My heavens!" she thought, "Heaven! My heart! Her beautiful hazel eyes grew wide with fear, and her little hand still over her heart, could feel its beating increase from its average of 145 a minute to 235."

"Oh, if what I fear is true, is true!" she breathed.

She caught her breath sharply, and and let it go again.

On the Spur of the Moment

ROY K. MOULTON

The Anvil Chorus.
Abner Jones resigned his job, just because it made him tired.

Sewin circle met next day and decided he was "tired".
Bushrod resler broke his leg, fallin' out of a ladder.

That he was rip-roarin' drunk was told in the town next day.
Berna Spink walked down the street with a lady and of course.

People had it: that his wife had decided on divorce.

Smith hired a stenographer, as his business had enlarged.
And the tongues wagged ceaselessly till the lady was discharged.

Mr. Perkins took a trip with some outside business men.
Sewin circle, when it met, softly whispered, "Soused again."

Billkins sold his touring car. Didn't like the way he had.
And the word was passed around that his business had been bad.

Mrs. Perkins needed clothes and she started saving cash.
Selling eggs and butter and cutting down her husband's cash.

Bought herself a summer suit and a four-foot leg horn hat.
Folks could not make out how she could "afford to dress like that."

Life within the pearly gates will not miss the anvil if you do pass.
For we think they will be told: "Leave your hummers all behind."

Tooth Etiquette.
Do not take the teeth out and polish them during a banquet. This is not done in the best circles.

Between the teeth in the tail between the ears, for you are liable to sit down on them and be severely bitten.

When you have to sneeze or cough go away by yourself in a dark corner and hold your hand over your mouth. You can never tell what will happen.

If the teeth click when you talk, oil them frequently, for many teeth often disturb the neighbors and there is enough to keep them awake at night without that.

Do not carry the toothbrush in the upper vest pocket. If you do people will know that you have not had your teeth very long.

Judo Lewis Says:
Somehow we sort of have to go into any theater show and have some woman with a hat plum full of plumes and things like that sit down between us and the scene and keep that hat up over her head so that only things we see are plumes and such like scenery, which lean first this way and then that. Oh, woman, I don't carry a hat and if you are as mean as that and hide the other fellow's view, we can't tell what you think of you. We cannot tell you that, by golly, for such words don't go in this coil.

Holding a Sick Man's Hand.
A certain man stayed out much later at night than his wife liked, and as he would never tell her where he had been, she got her little boy to ask him.

One morning at breakfast the youngster said: "Dad, where wuz yer last night?"

"Never you mind where I was," answered father.

"But," insisted the boy, "where wuz yer?"

"Well, if you must know, I was sitting up with a sick friend."

"Oh, did yer sick friend die?"

"What an absurd question! Of course he didn't die!"

"Oh, but did you hold yer sick friend's hand?"

"No," answered the father; "how foolish you are. Of course I didn't. And then he added with a far-away look in his eyes: 'I wish to heaven I had. He held four acres!'"

Too True.
Scrambled eggs can be made to serve more persons than the same number of fried or boiled eggs. To "stretch" the serving capacity add a spoonful of boiled rice when scrambling them. And there are some eggs you can scramble and pass around to twenty persons and still be unable to get rid of them.

PUBLIC INVITED TO MONDAY'S MEETING

Methodist Brotherhood Extend Open Invitation to Citizens of Janesville to Hear Governor.

It appears not to be generally understood that the Methodist Brotherhood, under whose auspices Governor Phillip is to appear here Monday and Tuesday at six-thirty, Monday evening, but also the address, which will be given in the church auditorium at 7:30 o'clock. The various brotherhoods of the city are invited to attend and those who are not members of any church organization are equally welcome. It is asked that all who desire to attend notify Reverend F. H. Brigham of the Carroll St. E. church, Rock County phone No. 539, or C. O. Eddy, chairman of the brotherhood committee having charge of the supper, Wisconsin phone No. 4, Janesville Machine company, or Rock County phone No. 277 Black, his residence, before Saturday noon, so that arrangements can be made for the accommodation of those who intend to be present at a supper.

The evening meeting is open to all and free to the general public. It is expected that many who do not attend the supper will be present at the speech, which should prove most interesting, as it touches upon the matters vital to the interest of the citizens generally, taxes and national politics. The governor will speak on these subjects and will explain many topics that have been under discussion some time past, to the best of his ability.

The general invitation for the address under such auspices might desire to be present and they are cordially invited, many having already signified their desire to hear the speech. The governor arrives at 5:12 over the Chicago Milwaukee & St. Paul road and a reception will be tendered him at the Methodist church from six to six-thirty, when the supper will start.

Twelve Hundred Birds Will Be on Exhibition at Annual Showing to Be Held in Rink Building.

Plans for the eighth annual chicken show held under the auspices of the Southern Wisconsin Poultry association are about complete and the show will be one of the largest and best ever held in this city and one of the largest ever held in the state. The arrangement committee have held in charge of the show, is getting things under way and everything will be ready for the opening on Jan. 17.

Fully twelve hundred birds will be on exhibition and the exhibitors that will be given away will total six hundred and fifty dollars. Twenty odd silver cups will be presented to the prize-winners and plenty of ribbons will be given away.

The show this year will be combined with the annual showing of three state specialty clubs. With the exhibits of these clubs the show will undoubtedly be the best ever held in the state. The officers of the association have visited other shows that are being held throughout the state and arrangements have been made with out-of-town exhibitors to have their birds on display here.

During the five days of the show thirty prize birds will be given away in the free contest of which all patrons of the show may participate. Each afternoon and evening a number will be drawn and the person holding the lucky number will be presented with three thoroughbred chickens. This will give an opportunity for the beginner to get a good start in raising some thoroughbred poultry.

Notice is hereby given that the annual meeting of the Citizens Mutual Fire Insurance company will be held at the office of the company, number 12 West Milwaukee street, at Four o'clock, p. m. Jan. 10, for the purpose of electing directors and officers and business that may come before the meeting.

AUTHORITY ON CORN WILL LECTURE HERE NEXT TUESDAY NIGHT

Most Noted Agriculturalist in U. S.
Secured to Address County Board and Twilight Club.

Members of the Janesville Twilight club, their guests, the Rock county board of supervisors, the senior agricultural class of the high school and their instructor, A. B. Holden, will have an occasion to hear the most noted agriculturalist in the United States, Prof. Holden, on Tuesday evening next. Prof. Holden, who is a native of Iowa, is a well known authority on corn. He is the originator of the Holden method of growing corn, which is now being taught in the agricultural schools of the United States. Prof. Holden's address will be a most interesting and instructive lecture dealing with the corn crop and elucidating the essential points in corn growing and selecting and testing of seed. Prof. Holden will bring with him a series of seed germination samples now being under cultivation in the boiler room at the high school. They will be placed in time to be ready by Tuesday evening.

Local Samples. J. A. Craig was in long distance communication with Prof. Holden this week and he is highly complimentary of Mr. Craig's corn samples of seed which Rock county farmers had sent away from last year's crop. Mr. Craig, with the assistance of L. A. Markham, county agent, is now in the city, where he is able to secure eleven samples and these are the ones now being sent to the high school. In his use of the Holden method, Prof. Holden will tell of growing and cutting and on the feeding values of corn. With the seed corn samples the address will be brought right to home, and farmers will be able to see the extent of the address. Prof. Holden's discourse will be a revelation even to many extensively conversant with corn conditions in Rock county.

STUDENTS WILL TEST RULE ON REGISTRATION CHARGES AT WISCONSIN UNIVERSITY

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Madison, Wis., Jan. 7.—Students of the university whose request for a return of a part of the money paid as registration as non-resident students, when they claim to be resident students, will make a test case of the matter in the courts. In about twenty cases the refund was refused. It is said that a committee of these students are now soliciting small sums from the other students and will make a test case of the matter in the courts. This legal evasion will determine who are and who are not resident students.

NEW PILLOW SHAPES OF A NOVEL DESIGN

Oblong, Long, Cushions of Pillows With Elaborate Trimmings Are Quite Fashionable.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

(By Margaret Mason.)

Here is a riddle I ask you to read: What is no cheaper, but dearer indeed? When it's marked down? If you give up, perforce, This is the answer—a Pillow, of course.

New York, Jan. 7.—Call it pillow or cushion, as you will; by any name it costs as much. Such a work of art, however, has it become that it almost seems worth it. A cushion is indeed comfy to have around one and a round one is the pink of perfection, especially when it is made of rose pink tulle, edged with cords, and caught together in the center with a cluster of French ribbon roses. A rosin egg blue one with a bunch of gold fruit in the middle is also alluring, but not so round robin. A heart of gold is a heart shaped, yellow velvet cushion with an edging of narrow brown fur binding and then, four fluffy chiffon ruffles, taut and jaded. An oblong pillow of seal skin, with deep ruffles of ecrus laces at each end, caught with carlands of tiny French ribbon flowers, is something nifty for a well rounded patrician elbow to rest upon, but it's not for a red rapped crazybone of the hot polloi. An oblong of black velvet with a wide, plain banding of silver gauze, four corners, with silver tassels, make a striking background for a golden head. Sort of a transfiguration of metals. Wonderful and bewilderingly exotic and Oriental are the bolster cushions made of bands of galcon Chinese embroidery, velvet, fur and beadwork. Because of their shape they are aptly dubbed Sausage Rolls. So diverse and piquant are the many materials used to make up their perfect wholes that yet another sausage similarity is accomplished. These "sausage roll" cushions are finished, usually, with silk covered buttons at each end, or tassels of ray hued silk or gold. Linenette pillows still are the curups of pillowdom with their alternate squares and stripes of flax, eyelet embroidery and stripes of pale tinted satin. One distinct novelty in the lingerie class is the pillow shaped like a half moon, with a frill of real lace and a cunning little monogrammed pocket for milady's hanky, set in the riot of its lace and embroidery. The dearest pillows of all, both affectionately and intrinsically, are the oblongs and circles of dull blues, purples and blacks, with vivid baskets and clusters of hectic fruit done yarn in their midst, and edgings of narrow and vivid yarn fringes. If you've got the Cush, you can get the Cushion.

CHARACTER OF MATERIAL IN UPHOLSTERED GOODS MUST BE STATED NOW

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Madison, Wis., Jan. 7.—That upholstered articles sold in the state in the future must state the character of the material, whether new or second hand, and whether the material has been thoroughly renovated, is the opinion of Attorney General Owen. He says that the designation of material used must be the one that is commonly applied to the material by the trade and not some patent name under which the material was given. The law was passed by the last legislature and took effect Jan. 1.

A sentry was giving close attention to his post in the neighborhood of a British army camp in England, after dark. The following is reported as an incident of his vigil: "Who goes there?" called the sentry at the sound of approaching footsteps. "Colostrum Guards," was the response. "Pass, Goldstream Guards," the sentry. "Forty-ninth Highlanders," returned the unseen pedestrian. "Who goes there?" sounded a third challenge. "None of your damn business," was the husky reply. "Pass, Canadian," acquiesced the sentry.

A Sunday school teacher had been telling her class of little boys about crowns of glory and heavenly rewards for good people. "Now, tell me," she said at the close of the lesson, "who will get the biggest crown?"

There was silence for a minute or two, then a bright little chap piped out: "Him who's got the biggest head."

EMILY STEVENS STARS IN FILM MASTERPIECE

"Destiny" or "The Soul of a Woman" Plays to a Capacity House at the Majestic.

The Metro Picture Co., struck a resounding note last night at the Majestic, when they presented Emily Stevens in a drama literally saturated with beauty and emotion, "Destiny," or "The Soul of a Woman," brought out in a very pretty way the right and wrong way of living, which can be discovered only by actual contact with the many-sided flash and brilliancy of the whirl of the world. By very clever double exposure work, the allegorical theme is presented, the four vices of life, avarice, lust, prima donna and tenor, respectively, will be presented at the Myers theatre, Sunday matinee and evening, Jan. 9.

rum and passion. Many times they overcome his fighting determination toward them and only by a sorrowful awakening does he see their shallow self. Miss Stevens beautifully plays the character of a lost soul, continually dipping her life into the kettle of pleasure and vice until the gilded life she has applied to herself becomes difficult to cleanse.

The new Majestic lighting system brought out the film's very striking photographic effects in a very clear and unobscured manner, one scene melting into another with only an unobscured power painting the announcement of the changes in appealing, been again tonight at the Majestic in "The Soul of a Woman."

Words if He's Crazy? Now a scientist announces that kissing is a sign of insanity. But that would appear to be a gross exaggeration. At the worst it can scarcely be considered anything more than a symptom of emotional intoxication.

AMERICAN AUDIENCES MOST CRITICAL DECLARES NOTED SOPRANO.

Miss Jenny Dufau, the celebrated French soprano, who is scheduled to sing at the Apollo club on Monday, Jan. 10, is quoted as having recently declared that she has found the concert audiences in America the most exacting of any country in which she has sung. "In Germany," states Miss Dufau, "one is successful if one sings the masterpiece of some of the German language in a skillful and artistic manner; the same is true in Italy where one is expected to sing only in Italian; in France the same is true, but in America, one must sing not only all the modern languages, but one must also sing the English language perfectly. I studied English when I was a child in school. Since I have come to America, I have striven to perfect my English and acquire the idiom of the language. More and more American audiences are demanding in the English language, and this is proper. The day of an operatic star going into concert with a few familiar arias and one or two waltz songs and a worn-out ballad has passed, happily, in America. The audiences, from the largest cities, to the smallest town, expect and demand a program of the widest variety and of the highest type. The talking machines and the music-study clubs have made this situation possible. What a delight it is to an artist, who takes her concert work seriously, to know that her audiences will appreciate and expect the best musical literature the world has produced."

AT MYERS THEATRE.

The popular musical comedy, "Adele," one of the most delightful musical plays seen in years, comes to the Myers theatre next Sunday, Jan. 9, matinee and night.

In the story, "Adele" is a dainty young miss who is in love with the son of her father's business rival. On account of parental objection and the necessity of obtaining her parents' consent to the marriage, she schemes to secure the aid of her father in settling upon a member of the French nobility, a large sum of money to marry her.

She determines, if successful, immediately after the marriage ceremony, prima donna and tenor, respectively, will be presented at the Myers theatre, Sunday matinee and evening, Jan. 9.

AT THE PRINCESS.

"The Campbells are Coming" Tonight. Battle scenes, cavalry charges, hand-to-hand fights between native Sepoy and British grenadiers—7,000 combatants in all—massacres, wholesale arson, the siege of a fort with mortars and the sweeping of masses of infantry with shrapnel and field artillery, together with sensational scenes and Oriental dancing as done by native Indian artists—all play a part in the massive five-act photodrama, "The Campbells are Coming."

"The Campbells are Coming" is a five-reel photodrama featuring Francis Ford and Grace Cunard, the stars of "The Broken Coin," Universal serial. The play is a military drama of the Sepoy rebellion in India in 1857, and contains battle scenes which are said to have no parallel in moving picture production.

One of the most sensational scenes in "The Campbells are Coming" is the flight of the lone scout from Cawnpore to Lucknow. In a dozen sabre battles on horseback he brings his native opponents crashing to the ground. As he and his horse are picking their way across a narrow rope and board bridge a native cuts the ropes and the rider's horse plunges forty feet to the bottom of the gully. The scout makes his way across the rope hand over hand and finally reaches Lucknow, where he engages in the stirring battle between the 7,000 natives and Scotch Highlanders.

"The Campbells are Coming" is the most expensive photodrama yet staged at Universal City. Every known conceivable sort of thrill has been incorporated in it. Craftsmen burn the homes of British soldiers and carry off their wives into the jungle in an attempt to drive their conquerors into the Indian Ocean.

Fresh Beginnings.

Be patient with everyone, but above all with yourself. I mean do not be disturbed because of your imperfections, and always rise up bravely from a fall. There is no better means of progress in the spiritual life than to be continually beginning afresh and never to think that we have done enough.—Francis de Sales.

From Nothing to $6,000,000 in Three Months

Three months ago today nobody had ever seen a Triangle Film Play.

Today moving picture theatres all over the country are paying at the rate of nearly six million dollars a year to show them!

Two million people will see Triangle Plays this week.

One day last spring half a dozen of us,—all practical experienced moving picture people,—decided the public was ready for better moving pictures than had ever been made,—ready enough to pay practically any price to get them.

Backed by a large capital and long experience, we were able to get into the project the three highest-paid, best-known producers in the world.

Griffith—who produced the "Birth of a Nation." Ince—who made the wild West famous in pictures. Sennett—maker of Keystone Comedies.

And with them the greatest aggregation of charming, beautiful women and brilliant men who ever acted together.

Just run your eye over this partial list:

Douglas Fairbanks Mae Marsh Lillian & Dorothy Gish Tully Marshall Thomas Jefferson Frank Campeau Helen Ware

Robert Herron William S. Hart Essie Barriscale Frank Keenan Enid Markey Katherine MacLeod Orrin Johnson

Weber & Fields Raymond Hitchcock Mabel Normand Roscoe Arbuckle Fred Mace Ford Sterling Truly Shattuck

The rush of success was not surprising; it was inevitable.

And it was not surprising, either, that,—working at top pressure every minute—we have only just got to the point where we can offer Triangle Plays to a motion picture theatre in this city.

Maybe the theatre you regularly go to is trying for the contract—unless he thinks he can hold your patronage with something that costs him less than Triangle Plays.

Speak to him next time you go by.

Ask him when Triangle Pictures are booked to come to him. For if his is the best house in town they'll be there.

CHAPTER VIII.

The Committee Gathers Corn.

ON OCT. 15 the committee came out to measure Joe's corn. The three gentlemen took a standard bushel measure and a standard scale, filled the measure by pulling the corn from the stalks themselves, then weighed it and made their calculations.

Joe had made 188 bushels of corn on an acre at a cost of $12.30.

The committee took his record sheet, where he had faithfully put down everything he had done in connection with the crop, how much he had spent, how many times and the dates of working, how much and what fertilizer and when and how applied, verified his calculations, certified their findings, signed it with Joe and forwarded it to the county superintendent of education.

Joe now began to gather his corn. The stalks he had marked for seed he got first; beautiful, perfect ears they were. Leaving a thin shuck upon these ears, he put them in sacks and suspended them from a hook in the ceiling of the attic so mice and rats could not get at them.

The three precious ears from the stalk showing the beginnings of a fourth ear, reserved to experiment with, he slipped each in a quart preserve jar, clean and dry, and screwed the top on tightly.

There were twelve bushels of "nubbins." These he began to feed to the pigs, now great, big fellows. He also gave them the Mexican June nubbins and the small, unsalable sweet potatoes left in the field. One could almost see those hogs putting on fat.

Joe went over his prize corn and culled out fifty bushels, mostly from the stalks bearing the two perfect ears and nubbins. He sold the fifty bushels for $2.50 a bushel. The ten best ears he saved to exhibit at the state fair. The sale of the seed corn brought in $125.

A few days after he had disposed of the fifty bushels a man came to him wanting some seed corn.

"Haven't any more," said Joe.

"My gracious, Joe, you ain't sold all that 180 bushels already, have you?"

"Oh, no; I've saved five bushels for seed for dad and myself—money could not buy that. I've sold fifty bushels of selected seed, and I've culled twelve bushels and eleven bushels of corn yet."

"Well, I'll take a bushel for seed."

"I'm not willing to let it go for seed."

"It is not the best; that is gone. Corn—just common, ordinary corn—is worth 70 cents. I'll sell it all to you at that."

"Ain't it good for seed?" queried the man in astonishment. "Ain't it outen that same patch?"

"Yes, but that don't make it good seed corn, or corn that I will guarantee to make what mine did with the same treatment. The fifty bushels of selected seed I did guarantee."

"Oh, shucks! The commonest stalk in that patch of yours is so much better than the rest of the corn raised around here that a feller is bound to do better with it. Gimme four bushels at 70 cents."

"All right—with the understanding that I'm not putting it out as seed I can vouch for."

The news was bruited around that Joe Weston was selling his fine corn at common corn prices, and in two weeks he had not a bushel left. To each buyer he explained the difference between field selected seed and that which he could not guarantee. Every buyer reasoned as the first one did and bought.

Now, 1 Joe went to town, taking the $77.70 for the corn. Added to the $125 he had got for seed, it made a total of $202.70 for the prize acre.

He was a bit worried as to whether he had acted fairly by Mr. Somerville in refusing $2.50 a bushel for the corn. The old merchant heard him through, then, placing his hands on Joe's shoulders and looking him straight in the eyes, he said:

"Son, don't you suppose I've heard of this long ago? And don't you suppose I was proud of you for acting with such scrupulous honesty and good faith with your customers? I've got plenty of money, Joe, in moderation, and I'd rather have had you do just exactly as you have done than to have some one give me a check for $1,000."

"I'm—I'm much obliged, sir. It just seemed right, and I was going to pay you the difference out of my part if it was wrong."

"Well, I wouldn't have taken it. Whenever anything 'seems right' to you, my boy, you go ahead and do it. Your ideas are straight."

Mr. Somerville had figured up accounts with Joe's father. Mr. Weston had also realized well from his cotton and corn; but, not taking the care Joe had, his yields were not half as large per acre. Still they were treble what he was accustomed to make.

"Well, I've come in to settle up and see about that bet you made that you 'ain't Joe'd make more off'n your four acres than I would off'n twenty-five," he said.

It was a different Tom Weston that confidently challenged Mr. Somerville from the morose, surly, envious, whisky drinking ne'er-do-well of the year before.

"Now, look here, Tom, I didn't mean in competition with a brand new Tom Weston. I meant that no account chap we used to know."

"There you go now, trying to crawl-fish! Be a little sport now and stand the racket!" laughed Tom, who was enjoying the situation hugely.

"Make him stick to it, daddy," advised Joe.

"Well, wait until that prize money is decided."

"No, street! We weren't talkin' about no prizes. We were considerin' straight farmin' an' sellin' stuff off the ground."

"That's right, daddy. We didn't know anything about any prizes when he said that. Don't let him out talk you!"

"Well, we'll have a showdown, then. Joe and I have taken in to date a total, counting $20 worth of turnips sold, of $613 altogether."

"Gee whiz, that's farmin' some, I tell you! I thought I had you beat."

"Well, we've had some cottonseed and some cowpeas that will add something—and pay all expenses."

"We won't count them, as that is part of our outfit, or our 'operating capital,'" said Joe.

"All right," said Mr. Somerville. "What did you make, Tom?"

"Six hundred and sixty dollars."

"Beat us $47, by George!" answered the merchant. "Well, Tom, old boss, I'm mighty near as proud of you as I am of Joe—proud of him for a fine partner and you for a fine man that's coming to your senses. I'll gladly pay the bet."

"Mr. Jones," he called to a clerk. "Take these gentlemen over to the clothing department and fit each of them with the best hat in the house and charge to my account."

After the hats had been got Mr. Somerville and Tom Weston and Joe walked over to the office of the county superintendent of education and found that official in.

"Look here, professor. When are you?" began Mr. Somerville.

"Just got the last report in this morning. I tell you it was a job getting returns from the fifty-eight boys in this county."

"Well, got any news for us?"

"Yes, I have. Mr. Joe Weston, I want to congratulate you now. I will announce in the paper tomorrow that you have won the first prize for this county."

"Wh—who was next?" gasped Joe.

"Oscar Henderson, but he did not come within ninety bushels of you. Really you have done remarkably well, son."

"Son, I'm powerful proud of ye," said all his father could say.

amazingly well, and you ought to stand a good show for the state prize.

"I'm calling a public meeting at the courthouse next Wednesday to award the prizes, so you better be on hand."

When they got outside of the door Mr. Weston shook hands with Joe solemnly.

"Son, I'm powerful proud of ye," said all his father could say as he placed his hand on Joe's shoulder.

"Well, by gracious, we beat 'em!" exclaimed Mr. Somerville, as they reached the street. He was really more excited than Joe was. "Come on over and get that suit of clothes and outfit I promised to the winner."

"Mr. Somerville, I think that suit ought to go to Oscar Henderson. You and I were partners on this farming business, and somehow I believe it would be best."

"There you are, right again! Of course there's no harm in your taking the suit, but I reckon it would be better to give it to the next highest man. I'll go right back in there and tell the professor about the suit for Oscar Henderson."

STORAGE EGGS HAVE EFFECT ON PRICES

Missouri Professor Explains Condition of the Poultry Market of Today.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Columbia, Mo., Jan. 7.—Opportunity in the poultry business today lies not in the production of eggs, but in the raising of poultry which is sold at market prices, but rather in the production of birds raised in the winter, which has no market value, W. A. Lippincott, professor of poultry husbandry at the Kansas State Agricultural College, ascertained an address at the College of Agriculture of the University of Missouri here today.

In his address, he urged community breeding and the establishment of more cold storage plants, pointing out that the surplus of eggs during the winter serves to stabilize prices.

"Probably not much more than 15 per cent of the eggs produced in this country find their way into cold storage, yet this number is sufficient to have a marked effect upon the prevailing price levels during the season of production and non-production," he said. "It is a fact, not as clearly recognized as it should be by either producers or consumers, that eggs are a seasonal product."

"Half the egg crop is produced in March, April, May and June. If it were not for the cooler and higher refrigerator temperatures referred to as a cold storage, the farmer would have to be content with a price between two cents and five cents a dozen for eggs during the season when they are plentiful, and the consumer would have to pay from $2.00 to $5.00 a dozen if he wanted eggs during the season when they are scarce."

Professor Lippincott emphasized an assertion that exhibition poultry must be classed among the luxuries. He pointed out that in times of financial depression the first lines of business to feel the stringency are those that have to do with the luxuries and said that in such times the public purchases poultry and eggs at good prices only after exhibition birds have ceased to be saleable at any price. The speaker said, however, that "this does not mean that there is no money in fancy poultry, but that it is at the best a hazardous undertaking, and that the much advertised rooster that sells for upwards of $100 in the show room has about as much relation to the furnishing of society with eggs and poultry as the race horse has to playing." He said: "A few men make money rearing and exhibiting poultry."

but in both cases the very many fail to make expenses.

"Commercially, the poultry industry of today has largely paralleled the history of the development of the modern common carriers, and advanced with improvement of refrigerator cars. It was not until means were afforded for transporting poultry products from the farm to the distant cities that production beyond the demand of home needs became an object, and poultry a source of considerable income."

"Even in its present high state of development, when the national valuation of the annual product is mounting toward a billion dollars," he continued, "it has essentially remained a home industry, providing, however, a considerable surplus which is handled commercially."

NUMEROUS CANDIDATES FOR INDIANA POLITICAL JOBS

Indianapolis, Jan. 7.—This is the last day on which candidates for Governor, U. S. Senator, President and vice president can file petitions asking that their names be placed on the ballot for the primary March 7. Few eleventh hour petitions were expected. With the direct primary just sixty days off, Republicans predicted a hot fight between Harry S. New and James Watson for the Republican nomination for U. S. senator, with Arthur R. Robinson trailing. John Worth Kern was the unopposed choice of the democrats for reelection.

John A. M. Adair is one of the leading aspirants of the democrats for the gubernatorial nomination. Adair is a congressman. He is opposed by dry democrats because of his vote against national prohibition.

Among the Republican candidates for Governor are: James P. Goodrich, former national chairman of the party; T. McCray of Kentland, Mayor of Gary and Quincy Fairbanks for president, and President Wilson and Vice President Marshall are expected to be unopposed in the primary.

A New Remedy for Kidney, Bladder and all Uric Acid Troubles.

Dear Readers:

I appeal to those of you who are bothered with kidney and bladder trouble, that you give up the use of harsh salts or alcoholic medicines and in their place take a short treatment of "Anuric." I have taken many of Dr. Pierce's medicines for the past twenty-five years with good results. I suffered with kidney trouble for some years. I recently heard of the newest discovery of Dr. Pierce, namely, his "Anuric" Tablets. After using same I am completely cured of my kidney trouble. A doctor pronounced me a well preserved woman for my age, all due, I believe, to Dr. Pierce's medical aid.

Mrs. Melinda E. Miller.

Note:—Dr. Eberle and Dr. Braithwaite as well as Dr. Simon—all distinguished medical authorities—agree that whatever may be the disease, the urine seldom fails in furnishing us with a clue to the principles upon which it is to be treated, and accurate knowledge concerning the nature of disease can thus be obtained. If backache, scalding urine or frequent urination bother or distress you, if uric acid in the blood has caused rheumatism, gout or sciatica, or you suspect kidney or bladder trouble, please write Dr. Pierce at his Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., send a sample of urine and describe symptoms. You will receive free medical advice after Dr. Pierce's chemist has examined the urine—this will be carefully done without charge, and you will be under no obligation. Dr. Pierce during many years of experimentation has discovered a new remedy, "Anuric," which is found to be thirty-seven times more powerful than lithia in removing uric acid from the system. If you are suffering from backache or the pains of rheumatism, go to your best druggist and ask for a 50-cent box of "Anuric" put up by Doctor Pierce. Advertisement.

Married Life on $80 a Month

By MRS. D. A. LEONARD

"So you want to resign," Mr. James looked whimsically down at Julia Osgood. "Is resigning going to become chronic with you? Hadn't we better make it a leave of absence?" His eyes twinkled merrily as he spoke.

"You have a perfect right to make fun of me, and I hope you'll enjoy it," Julia was perfectly calm under his amused smile. "As I am to be married in three weeks, I believe you will be safe in accepting my resignation."

"So soon as that?" he asked. "Why, you must have most of your togetherness ready."

"It is not going to be a question of much togetherness," she said. "I am moving in society."

"Well, here's wishing you well," he gave her a hearty handshake. "I am a lucky dog and I'll tell you so when I see him again. I suppose you will be married at home, as usual."

"Yes, but it will be a very quiet wedding. No one outside the family."

"Julia turned after she had started for the door and said, 'I want to thank you for all your kindness to me. I have appreciated it. I assure you, I could not have had a more considerate employer.' He bowed his thanks and she was gone."

"Well, that is over with," Julia stopped at John Sumner's desk. "Now I will once more clear out my table. This is positively my last appearance," she grinned as she opened the table drawer.

"I hope you will at least come sometime in the capacity of caller," said John. "I had a taste of this laced spice," Julia made him an exaggerated bow.

"Tell Molly I am coming over with my work one of these days, so we can get some visiting done as well as sewing," Julia gave this commission on the way out.

"All right. That will please her," John called after her.

"I should like to think no one would miss me," she smiled and passed on out.

As John was looking up his desk door and said, "Mr. James wants John Sumner to come to the office."

John gathered his papers and taking his hat followed the boy out, called down, Sumner. "James motioned to a chair."

"First, you will probably be interested to know that the jury found Tyler guilty on the first ballot, the prison. But that isn't what I called you in here for. I have been thinking ever since Tyler left us that I watched you pretty closely and I am satisfied that you are making honest efforts to clear yourself of debt and debts. I have not filed Tyler's place as you know, and now I am going to let you try it."

"Tyler's place? Make me cashier?" asked John, hardly able to speak from surprise.

"That's it. Make me cashier," "Oh, thank you, Mr. James. I surely will do my best to give you satisfaction."

"Tyler's salary will be increased to one hundred dollars a month," added James, rising and extending his hand.

toxic states, will increase blood pressure markedly. For instance, uracemia. This is why the expectant mother should have her blood pressure measured occasionally if she is not perfectly well. Over-eating and excessive quantity of meat in the diet will raise blood pressure. Tobacco, alcohol, lead poisoning and certain chronic infectious diseases likewise elevate the pressure above normal and help to wear out the arteries.

A man is as old as his arteries and a woman is as old as she looks, sense by the measurement of the blood pressure with the sphygmomanometer. Part of the annual physical examination which every man over thirty should have, if he values his body as highly as he values his automobile or his watch, is the blood pressure test. It will tell him whether he is living beyond his physical means.

Household Hints

Baked Beans Sandwiches.—Baked beans with a suggestion of chili sauce on them, make a delicious filling for brown bread sandwiches.

Delicious Sandwich Filling.—Peel and grate two tart apples, mix with two cups fresh cottage cheese and four tablespoons thick cream. Season rather highly with salt and paprika, blend thoroughly and spread between thin slices of buttered brown bread.

THE TABLE.
Baked Beans and Pork.—One pound navy beans, one-half pound fresh pork, two tablespoons brown sugar, one teaspoon paprika, one tablespoon salt. Pick beans over, removing discolored ones; wash well, cover with boiling water, set on back of warm stove two hours. Drain, cover again with boiling water, add meat, sugar, paprika and relish; set over low flame three hours. All enough more water to cover. Add salt, place in hot oven until dry enough to suit.

Browned Flour for Gravies.—Spread flour in a skillet or tin dish, place it on stove or in very hot oven. After it has become colored, stir until browned all through. Cool, place in glass jar for convenient use.

Fried Noodles.—Break one egg in a cup, fill with water, add pinch of salt, mix with flour, (when dry enough) roll up into thin sheets; boil in salted water ten minutes; drain, brown one cup fine bread crumbs in butter; add noodles, toss together and serve.

Creamed Ham.—Take two slices of raw ham (smoked about one-half inch thick and cut each slice in about four pieces. Put in frying pan with enough cold water to cover; boil three minutes. Turn off water and cover again with boiling water and pepper and three large onions sliced. Keep on adding hot water as gravy gets down, but always just enough to cover meat. When done (about one and one-half or two hours) drain one-half pint sweet cream and thickener, gravy with a little flour.

Scrambled Eggs with Oysters.—A little better than oyster omelette. Scramble eggs with cream and butter and just before the eggs are done put in the oysters, which have been previously drained. Season with salt, pepper and paprika; cook until edges of oysters curl.

Fried Oysters or Chicken.—Make a thickening for gravy of flour and water, pinch of salt and small pinch of soda; do not have it too thick—just so it will stick to the oysters. Fry in hot butter or drippings. For chicken, take a year-old chicken, boil until tender, drain, dip in above thickening and fry in butter or drippings. The thickening that is left will do for gravy and the broth that the chicken was boiled in will do for soup.

New Banana Sauce.—Take three large mellow bananas, cut in four pieces lengthwise, and lay them in a well-buttered casserole. Take one tumblerful of either currant or red raspberry jam; beat with soft fork until well broken and spread over the fruit. Take two more bananas cut the same way, and put over the jam; sprinkle with one tablespoon brown sugar and one teaspoon lemon or orange juice. Put on cover and bake fifteen minutes. Remove cover and bake five minutes longer. Serve with fried chicken or a lamb roast.

Creamed Carrots.—Scrape carrots dice and cook until tender. Drain off water, add milk, salt, pepper, table spoon butter. Let come to boil. Add flour stirred in a little milk to make thin gravy.

English Cake.—Two cups brown sugar, one cup butter and lard mixed (scant), two eggs, one cup cold coffee, one level teaspoon soda, one teaspoon baking powder sifted, with three cups flour, one teaspoon nutmeg, one teaspoon cinnamon. Beat can be made with one cup brown sugar and enough sweet cream to moisten so it can be spread on cake.

German Apple Cake.—Line deep baking dish with a raised dough (good biscuit dough will do). Have dough about half inch thick. Fill dish with thickly sliced raw apples in layers, each layer sprinkled thickly with sugar, bits of butter and a dash of cinnamon. When dish is level fill cover with water and bake slowly. This needs no sauce, only appetite.

TO MAKE CLOTHESPIN APRON.
This is a great help in hanging out clothes especially during winter. Make it about sixteen inches long and eighteen inches wide, rounded at the corners, cut double. At each side near the belt cut the outside piece away and bind making openings to put in the pins and take them out. Bind edges of apron and attach it to a belt of cotton laced gloves or mittens should be kept with the clothes plus in the apron to wear when hanging out the clothes in cold weather.

When the apron is not in use, fasten the belt and hang up.

Why Eyes Sparkle.
Merriment causes a frequent movement of the eyelids up and down, and as it is the function of the eyelid to release a tear each time it comes down, the repetition has the effect of covering the eye with considerable moisture.

The light shining on this moisture gives the sparkling effect. Inasmuch as the merry appearance of the eye is caused by tears, we are apt to shed them from laughing as well as from crying. Tears are intimately associated with our merry and our sad moods.

OPENING OF SOCIAL SEASON AT CAPITAL

New Mistress of White House Will Entertain Delegates and Their Wives at Reception.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
Washington, Jan. 7.—Official Washington tonight is to greet the new mistress of the White House for the first time in her social capacity as first lady of the land. President and Mrs. Wilson will entertain the delegates to the Pan-American congress and their wives at a huge reception in the Executive mansion. It will be the formal opening of the social season at the White House.

The reception in many ways will be unique. It will be the first formal event of its kind that has been held in the mansion for two years, all customary events being put aside last winter by the death of the President's first wife. Also, the reception will introduce not only Mrs. Wilson but a number of new faces in the reception line.

For the first time Mrs. Lansing will be there as the wife of the Secretary of State. At the last reception in the White House, Mrs. Bryan held this position. The appointment of Attorney General Gregory to fill the vacancy caused when Attorney General McKim resigned to accept a place on the supreme bench, will result in that department being represented for the first time by a cabinet wife. Mr. McKim's wife is a bachelor.

The reception line will stand in the East wing of the Executive mansion. On the head and in his side, Mrs. Wilson, Vice President and Mrs. Marshall will stand next, followed by Mrs. Lansing, Mrs. Garrison, Mrs. Daniels, Mrs. Adams, and the other cabinet ladies in order.

During the reception the Marine band will play and refreshments will be served in the state dining room. On the menu, the President and Mrs. Wilson will entertain the members of the cabinet and their wives at dinner in the White House and from then on the Executive mansion will be the scene of regular state functions.

The January 11 dinner will be the first diplomatic dinner at the White House. The French representative in this country and dean of the diplomatic corps, will be the honored guest. There will be present at this dinner ambassadors representing the entente powers and certain of the neutrals. January 25 will be the date for the dinner at which Count von Bernstorff, German ambassador and ranking second to Jussarand in the diplomatic corps, will be the guest of honor, together with ambassadors from the central powers and certain neutrals. The judicial reception will be on February 4, Supreme Court dinner, February 8; Congressional reception, February 15; Speaker's dinner, February 22, and the Army and Navy reception March 3.

Letters May Be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of The Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) What would be a nice birthday present for a boy of fourteen?

(2) My best boy friend thinks I care more for another boy than I do for him. What shall I do to show him that I care more for him?

(3) Is a friendship ring a nice present for a boy?

(4) If you do not care for a boy, what should you do to show him you don't care for him?

(5) I am sixteen years old. Should a boy squeeze me the first time he goes with me?

(6) Should a boy call a girl baby names, if they are not engaged, for instance, Pet, Old Kid, Baby, Mille and Deez?

(7) I would be silly to try to show him. Let him think what he wants to.

(8) A friendship ring is a piece of jewelry and a boy should not give a girl jewelry unless they are engaged.

baseball, bat, tennis racket or anything that would be useful in athletics. I have mentioned good presents to give a member of the family. A girl should not give a boy friend a present.

(9) I would be silly to try to show him. Let him think what he wants to.

(10) A friendship ring is a piece of jewelry and a boy should not give a girl jewelry unless they are engaged.

(11) No, he should not.

(12) The names you mention are disrespectful. Nicknames are sometimes very attractive, but pet names are too familiar.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a mid-dle-aged woman. I am a mid-dle-aged woman. I am a mid-dle-aged woman.

I was keeping company with a man several years older than myself. This man is rich. He had promised to marry me and said he liked me and that I was just the kind of a woman he wished. We were going to be married a month from now. Now he has told me that he won't marry me. He has broken his promise and said what can I do? I was not engaged to him, but he had promised to marry me for sure and gave a letter proving it. Please tell me what to do.

A FAITHFUL READER.
You could consult a lawyer and sue the man for breach of promise, but it would mean injury to your reputation. If I were you I would consider the matter an unfortunate experience and think of it as little as possible.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Do you think a fellow cares for a girl if he sends her his picture for a Christmas present?

(2) Do you think a husband ought to give his wife a picture for a Christmas present?

(3) Does it make much difference if the fellow is much taller than the girl?

(4) Do you think it right for a girl of eighteen to go with fellows if her mother objects? R. D.

(1) He likes her or he wouldn't want her to have his picture, but the present is no indication of how much he likes her.

(2) I should think he would be glad to have her go.

(3) Not if they are congenial.

(4) If the mother objects because of the kind of fellows, she ought to respect her mother's wishes.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been going with a girl for about a year and we are engaged to be married. It would nearly break our hearts if we were to be separated any length of time. I am a young man of twenty and poor. Today I mean that I will have to go away for a long time and perhaps for a few years, but I will have a splendid opportunity to make money. I left my girl to break my heart if I married and struggled along or go away and make money?

Go away and make money. If you work hard you may be able to marry in a year or so. Both you and the girl will be happier if you start mar-

Mix the Breakfast Biscuits the Night Before—

Set Them Away in a Cool Place and Bake them Fresh in the Morning

If the family do not all eat breakfast together, you can bake a few at a time. If you are having hot biscuits for supper, mix and cut out enough more for breakfast. They will be much nicer freshly baked than warmed over.

Of course you can't do this very successfully with sour milk and soda or with any of the old fashioned, single acting baking powders, but this convenient way of making hot biscuits and muffins for breakfast is entirely satisfactory if you use which is really a blend of two baking powders, one of which begins to give off leavening gas as soon as moisture is added. The other is inactive until heat is applied. The dough will remain in a partly leavened condition for hours and when put in the oven will come up just as light and fluffy as if freshly mixed.

Get a can of K.C. today and try this easy way of baking biscuits at once. You'll never go back to the old way.

articles, and so many homes needing chairs and tables and almost everything else.

Heading Together But Not Aboard.
Two friends of mine, a husband and wife, had several books among their Christmas gifts. I asked them if they should read them aloud. "No," she said. "We never read aloud."

I was disappointed, that being my ideal of conjugal companionship. But she went on to say that they could not get along fast enough, reading aloud, and then it tires our throats. So we divide the books into pairs and he reads one and I the other. Then we exchange. That gives us all the pleasure of comparing notes without the tedium and strain of reading aloud. We do that with all our reading.

An excellent plan, I think. Don't you?

AFTER CHRISTMAS JOTTINGS.

There's one thing I've made up my mind to do before next Christmas. I wonder if you'll care to do it, too?

For a New Year's gift for myself I'm going to buy a little notebook, and in it I'm going to jot down the good things, stories, etc., sizes of the various people for whom I usually buy Christmas gifts. I'm going to do that right now while no one suspects that I have any ulterior motives in making it.

I don't know how many times this past year I missed chances like that because I wasn't sure of the size. Sometimes I've spent perfect good money telephoning to find out and other times even when I wasn't possible. Of course you can't always exchange goods bought at sales and even when that privilege is allowed, the other sizes of the goods will probably be sold out long before Christmas.

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—And Now Father Feels a Little Better About It—

CHAPTER I.

Troyon's. Troyon occupied a corner in a jungle of side streets, well withdrawn from the bustle of the adjacent boulevards of St. Germain and St. Michel, and in its day was a restaurant famous with a fame jealously guarded by a select circle of patrons. Its cooking was the best in Paris, its cellar second to none, its rates ridiculously reasonable; yet Baudeker knew it not. And in the wisdom of those who did know this was well; it were a pity to lose upon so excellent an establishment those swarms of tourists that profane every temple of gastronomy on the right bank of the Seine.

The building was of three stories, painted a dingy drab, and trimmed with dull-green shutters. The restaurant occupied almost all of the street front of the ground floor; a blank, non-committal double doorway at one extreme of the plate-glass windows was seldom open and even more seldom noticed.

A medieval maze of corridors, long and short, complicated by many unexpected steps and staircases and enigmatic doors, running every which way, and as a rule landing one in the wrong room, linked together some two-score bed-chambers. There were no salons or reception rooms, there was never a bathroom, there wasn't even running water aside from two hallway taps, one to each story.

With such accommodations the guests of Troyon's were well content. One did much as one pleased there, providing one's bill was paid with tolerable regularity and the hand kept supple that operated the cord in the small hours of the night. Papa Troyon came from a tribe of innkeepers and was liberal-minded; while as for Madame, his wife, she cared for nothing but pieces of gold.

To Troyon's on a wet winter night in the year 1893 came the child who, as a man, was to call himself Michael Lanyard. He must have been four or five years old at that time; an age at which consciousness is just beginning to recognize its individuality and memory registers with capricious irregularity. He arrived at the hotel in a state of excitement involving an almost abnormal sensitiveness to impressions; but that was soon drowned deep in dreamless slumber of healthy exhaustion; and when he came to look back through a haze of days, of which each had made its separate and imperative demand upon his budding emotions, he found his store of memories strangely dulled and disarticulate. And the child soon gave over his instinctive, but rather inconsequent, efforts to retrace his history. Life at Troyon's furnished him with compelling and obliterating interests. Madame saw to that.

It was Madame who took charge of the child when the strange man dragged him crying from the cab through a cold, damp place gloomy with shadows and upstairs to a warm, bright bedroom; a formidable body, this Madame, with cold eyes and many hairy moles, who made odd noises in her throat while she undressed the little boy with the sound of a saw, and who made the man standing by, noises meant to sound compassionate and maternal, but to the child at least, hopelessly otherwise.

Then drowsiness stealing upon one over a pillow wet with tears—oblivion.

And Madame it was who ruled with iron hand the strange new world to which the boy awakened.

The man was gone by morning, and the child never saw him again; but inasmuch as those about him understood no English and he no French, it was some time before he comprehended the false assurances of Madame that his father had gone on a journey, but would presently return. The child knew positively that the man was not his father, but when he was able to make this correction the matter had faded into insignificance. He had become too painful to leave

(time or inclination for the adjustment of such minor and incidental questions as that of one's parentage.)

The little boy soon learned to know himself as Marcel, which wasn't his name, and before long was unaware he had ever worn another. As he grew older he became known as Marcel Troyon; but by then he had forgotten how to speak English.

It was a few days after his arrival that the warm, bright bed-chamber was exchanged for a cold, dark closet opening off Madame's boudoir, a cupboard furnished with a rickety cot and a broken chair, lacking any provision for heat or light and ventilated solely by a transom over the door; and inasmuch as Madame shared the French horror of drafts and so kept her boudoir hermetically sealed nine months of the year, the transom didn't help matters much. But that closet formed the boy's sole refuge, if a precarious one, through several years; there alone was he ever safe from kicks and cuffs and scoldings for faults beyond his comprehension; but he was never permitted a candle, and the darkness and loneliness made the place one of haunted terror to the sensitive and imaginative nature of the growing child.

He soon learned an almost uncanny cunning in the art of effacing himself when she was imminent, to be as still as death and to move with the silence of a wraith. Not infrequently his hidden immobility in a shadowy corner escaped her notice as she passed. But it exasperated her beyond measure to look up, when she fancied herself alone, and become aware of the wide-eyed, terrified stare of the transfixed child.

That he was privileged to attend school at all was wholly due to a great fear that obsessed Madame of doing anything to invite the interest of the authorities. She was an honest woman, according to her lights, an honest wife, and kept an honest house; but she feared the gendarmes more than the wrath of God. And by ukase of government a certain amount of education was compulsory. So Marcel learned, among other things, to read, and thereby took his first blind step toward salvation.

Before Marcel was eleven he had read "Les Misérables" with intense appreciation. His reading, however, was not long confined to works in the French language. Now and again some departing guest would leave an English novel in his room, and those Marcel treasured beyond all other books; they seemed to him, in a way, a part of his brightness. He called himself, secretly, English in those days, because he knew he wasn't French—that much, at least, he remembered. And then some accident threw his way a small English-French dictionary. He was able to read English before he could speak it.

Out of school hours a drudge and scullion, the associate of scullions and their immediate betters, drawn from that caste of loose tongues and looser morals which breeds servants for small hotels, Marcel at eleven—as nearly as his age can be computed—possessed a comprehension of life at once exact, exhaustive and appalling.

By fifteen he had developed into a long, lank, loutish youth, with a face of extraordinary pallor, a sullen mouth, hot black eyes, and dark hair like a mane, so seldom was it trimmed. He looked considerably older than he was, and the slightness of his body was deceptive, disguising a power of sinewy strength. More than this, he could carve very handsily for himself in a scum-bag—a savate (fighting with the feet) had no secrets from him, and he had picked up tricks from the Apaches quite as effectual as any in the manual of jiu-jitsu.

Paris he knew as you and I know the palms of our hands, and he could converse with the precision of the native-born in any one of the city's several odd argots. To these accomplishments he added that of a thoroughly practiced petty thief.

His duties were by day those of valet de chambre on the third floor;

by night he acted as omnibus in the restaurant. For those services he received no pay and less consideration from his employers—who would have been horrified by an innuendo that they countenanced slavery—only his board and a bed in a room on the ground floor at the back of the house boasting a small window overlooking a narrow alley.

He was routed out before daylight, and his working day ended, as a rule, at ten in the evening—but once back in his kennel, its door closed, Marcel was free to squirm out of the window and roam and range Paris at will. And it was thus that he came by most of his knowledge of the city.

But for the most part Marcel preferred to lie abed and read himself half blind by the light of purloined candle-ends. Books he borrowed as of old from the rooms of guests or else pilfered from quayside stalls. But now and again the guests would pay further, if unconscious tribute, through the sly abstraction of small coins. Your true Parisian, however, keeps track of his money to the ultimate sou, an idiosyncrasy which obliged the boy to practice most of his peculations on the fugitive guest of foreign extraction.

In the number of these, perhaps the one best known to Troyon's was Bourke.

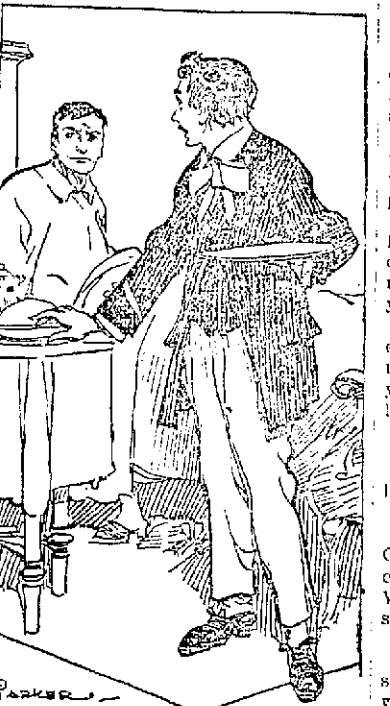

He was a quick, compact, dangerous little Irishman who had fallen into the habit of "resting" at Troyon's whenever a vacation from London seemed a prescription apt to prove wholesome for a gentleman of his kidney; which was rather frequently, arguing that Bourke's professional activities were fairly onerous.

Having received most of his education by Dublin university, Bourke spoke the purest English known, or could when so minded, while his facile Irish tongue had caught the trick of an accent which passed unchallenged on the boulevards. He had an alert eye for pretty women, a heart as big as all outdoors, no scruples worth mentioning, a secret sorrow, and a pet superstition.

The hue of his hair, a clamorous red, was the spring of his secret sorrow. By that token he was a marked man.

His pet superstition was that as long as he refrained from practicing his profession in Paris, Paris would stand toward him as an impenetrable tower of refuge. The world owed Bourke a living, or he so considered, but Paris was tax-exempt as long as Paris let him alone.

Not only did Paris suit his tastes excellently, but there was no place, in Bourke's esteem, comparable with Troyon's for peace and quiet. Hence his visits were unpunctuated by trials of rival hostilities, and Troyon's was always expecting Bourke for the simple reason that he invariably arrived rived unexpectedly, with neither warning nor ostentation, stopped as long as he liked, whether a day or a week or a month, and departed in the same manner.

His daily routine, as Troyon's came to know it, varied but slightly—he breakfasted abed, about half after ten, dined early and well, but always alone, and shortly afterward departed by cab for some well-known bar on the Rive Droite; and the hour of his return remained a secret between himself and the concierge.

PIDGIN ISLAND

"When I come back it will be written on my face and in my eyes." He picked up his hat, looked down at Cranford, smiled oddly, passed from the room and gently shut the door.

No sooner was he gone than the woman who had denied his hand flew wildly to the door and stopped before her hand touched the knob.

"No, no, Frances!" cried Diana.

"But I cannot let him carry away that lie. I might never see him again."

"Do not call him back. He must have something to fight for, to win back. He knows. He has the keenest eye and the quickest mind of any man I know."

Frances turned and ran swiftly back to her room, closing the door violently. Diana looked sadly at the bowed man in the chair. The knowledge that she was the daughter of the notorious Smead had crushed him.

"Mr. Cranford, are you ill?"

"I don't know. I'm afraid to move. I shall fall down."

Diana touched the bell. "Some cold chicken and a glass of milk. Have you any port wine in the house?"

"Yes, Miss Wynne."

"Martha, bring me the wine first. That'll set me up till I can get back to the hotel. Will you have them hitch up the team? I feel pretty weak."

He sipped the wine, and shortly the glow of it permeated his veins. He set the glass under the chair and smiled.

Diana was not expecting that smile, for it was warm and friendly.

"You were to call me Cran," he said.

"Cran, I am sorry."

"Sorry for what? Who was that young woman?"

"My brother's wife."

"You told me you were married."

"No, Cran; I told you that I could not marry any man—any man I might wish to marry. Can I—Michael Smead's daughter—a notorious gambler, a man without feeling or kindness or truth or honor—my father?"

He got up and steeled himself by holding on to the chair. "I must look pretty well banged up. Will you marry me, Diana?"

"No"—quietly. "Smead's daughter cannot marry a man of your station."

If only he knew how desperately she was fighting! She wanted him—wanted his head on her breast, close to her heart—wanted to run her fingers through his tousled hair—wanted him!

"Come; supposing I took you at your word and married you. Could you introduce me to your friends? I am proud."

"In heaven's name, why not?" His hand slipped from the chair and he crossed the room unsteadily. "Look at me—in the eyes, Diana, and tell me you will not marry me."

"I will not marry you, Cran." Her eyes looked up into his, bravely and unwaveringly. "It is rather cruel of you. I'm helpless; I cannot get up and leave you."

"Do you want to leave me?"

"Yes."

"Repeat after me," he said. "I do not love you."

She was silent.

"What is your father to me—friends?"

Out of the world somewhere you have come to me, and I shall not let you go. Will you wreck your life and mine over such a willy phantom?"

"Please go," she begged.

"I'd be a fine lover, wouldn't I? I shall stay here till the sun rises unless you tell me one way or the other."

Love! The kind a woman dreams of—waits for.

A smile quivered on her lips, and he saw it. He seized her hand, turned it palm upward and pressed it against his face. After a moment he looked up.

"You can't say it?"

"No."

"You don't want me to go?"

"No."

"Will you marry me?"

"I ought not to, but I will—whenever you wish." And to make the surrender complete she drew his head tightly to her heart and laid her cheek upon it.

Smead turned the note over and over in his hand. His cigar went from one corner of his mouth to the other. Occasionally a small wave slapped noticeably against the gunwale and splashed his knees.

His teeth sank into the tobacco. The young fool "would" be back quickly enough when his money gave out. Still he ought not to have been so rough with him that day in Kingston. But the cool banter of the boy had maddened him.

Suddenly his teeth met with a click, and the cigar bounced and rolled down his chest to the bottom of the boat.

Played! He knew now. The boy had them. Possession had given him this courage. A quarter of a million, and South America, where no one would ask questions!

Played! Diana should tell him where the boy had gone, and, if it was the last thing he ever did, he would, and him. Played all along; actually made sport of!

At the farm he called for Miss Smead. There was nobody there by that name. "Perhaps it is Miss Wynne you wish to see?"

Wynne? So she had taken her mother's name?

"I am her father. I wish to see her."

Cranford, the smiling old aristocrat (though at this moment his face was grave enough, the lawyer and a young woman he did not know, were standing behind Diana's chair.

Smead looked keenly at his daughter's face. She was as beautiful as ever her mother had been. The sight of her stirred nothing in his heart, no tender quickening, no regret.

"I wish to see you alone," he said directly.

"Whatever you may have to say to me must be said in the presence of my friends," she replied.

Straight from the shoulder. He nodded with appreciation. "I am your father."

"Beyond that accident of chance," she replied. "I do not recognize you."

"Where's Donald?" he asked.

"He is, I hope, on his way to South America. If I knew exactly where I should not tell you."

Smead laughed. "Well, you are wasting your time. He has lied to us all lately. He went away with the guns stowed in his pocket. Fine reformation that!"

"That is not true."

"And who might you be?" inquired Smead coldly.

"I am Donald's wife," answered Frances.

He appraised her critically.

"Did you ever hear of the emeralds of the Princess Xenia, so called?" asked Smead.

He could at least twist their hearts a bit if nothing more.

"Yes. He left a note for me," interrupted Diana, "telling me what he did with them."

"And if he has the jewels he has certain rights to them. They were mine," said Frances.

"Yours? Stole them from you, his wife?" said Smead.

"Perhaps he only took them," she modified.

"All men are not rogues."

"Mr. Smead," said Diana, "I was born at sea, and my mother was buried at sea. And while she lay lying in the stateroom below, calling for you, calling for you, you told the steward not to bother you. You were busy playing cards in the smokeroom on deck. There is a burial at sea between you and me, Mr. Smead. These are the last words I shall ever speak to you."

Cranford stepped to the door and opened it.

Right about face, with never a glance back into the open, down the path to the dock went Smead.

"Simmons," said the very old man, "I hate that man greater than all the hatreds in my life combined, yet what a son-in-law he would have made born right!"

"I am tired, and my arm aches," said Diana.

"Grandchild, I am a very old, very lonely man. I have brought my pride to you and laid it at your feet. If your mother had come to me at any time God is witness I would have taken her in my arms. But she was proud, too proud to admit that her judgment was wrong and mine was right. I want young people in my house. I want to hear laughter, music, coming and going. I want the ghosts driven out of its corners."

"Grandfather, I am going to marry the man I love, whatever he says."

"Mr. Wynne," said Cranford, "I have but little, yet I believe that little will suffice. I could not live on my wife's bounty."

"But she is bound to inherit what I have. Why waste all this time?"

"Let us compromise," interposed the suave Simmons. "Small birthday and Christmas gifts and Thursdays and Sundays to dine at Mr. Wynne's."

Diana looked up at Cranford, and he looked down at her.

Then they both laughed, and the grandfather laughed, and Simmons cackled, and the young woman with the tragic eyes smiled.

"To that we agree," said Cranford. And then Uncle Billy came rushing into the parlor.

"Hey, Miss Wynne, I got 'em!"

From under his arm he took the gray cotton casings, and shook forth the butts of two feds.

With trembling fingers he unscrewed the caps. A silvery cascade poured into Diana's lap—pearls, pearls, pearls!

"That was the wall I could not get over. I knew not how they were going to smuggle them in. Cran, these belonged to Frances' mother. Uncle Sam has had his fithes long ago. But if you had stumbled upon them earlier you would have had to report them, and they might have been confiscated."

"Diana," said the wife, "he meant it!"

"Of course he did! Uncle Billy!"

"Eh?"

"Mr. Cranford and I are going to be married this afternoon."

"And Mr. Cranford," said the owner of that name, "desires the pleasure of your company as best man."

"By jings!" exclaimed Uncle Billy. "What d'ye know 'bout that?"

Diana took Cranford's hand and laid it against her cheek and stared out of the window through the late September haze toward Pidgin Island.

"Lover!" she whispered.

THE END.

Forty Years Ago

The Janesville Daily Gazette, Jan. 7, 1876.—William Porter avows he will hereafter vote for Ludington for any office he wants.

The weather is still a wonder to the oldest inhabitant. Of course, nothing like it was ever seen.

Rock county will furnish its quota of candidates for offices in the legislature. It is too bad there is not room for all.

We understand that all that delays the erection of the additional cotton mill building is the want of the proper kind of lumber. Were this on hand the work would begin at once and the chimney. The money question is virtually settled.

Hon. J. S. Todd came up from Beloit today to tackle the windmill suit in the circuit court. Much interest is being shown by the people of Rock county in this case and the outcome is being closely watched.

St. Bride of Ireland. St. Bride, the patroness of Ireland and of Fleet street, whose feast day in February, was the beautiful daughter of a bard who became the religious disciple of St. Patrick and abbot of Kildare. The story of St. Bride or Bridget, fired the Celtic imagination, and in Ireland about twenty parishes bear the name of Kilbride. The spire of her church in Fleet street has been twice struck by lightning and much reduced from the original height, but is still one of the tallest steeples in London. It is supposed to have been designed by Wren's young daughter—Pall Mall Gazette.

Nov. 10, 1914:—"All my life, until about a year ago, I was troubled with blisters and sores over my entire body. The itching and burning was terrible, and I could hardly sleep. I used many treatments that were unsuccessful and did not give me any relief. I started using Resinol Ointment, and Resinol Soap and they helped me wonderfully. I WAS RELIEVED AT ONCE, and after about two dozen applications I can say that I was free and cured of that awful disease. My skin now is as clear as anybody's."—(Signed) Geo. Whitaker, Jr., R. F. D. FARMERS' INTELLIGENCE,

NEED EXPERT ADVICE

Farmers Can Benefit Themselves in Same Manner That Other Business Men Do.—Cost Is a Small Item.

By Allen B. West.

The individuals who think that the advocating of the need of a county agent is an insult to the intelligence of the farmers of the county do not appreciate the importance of the scope of the work of the modern farmer. As a rule it is not the most ignorant farmer who desires the help of the county agent, but the most intelligent one, the one who realizes that farming is a science, or possibly one should say an art based on a knowledge of many sciences.

Other Businessmen Have Experts.

What man in business or in the professions is required to be familiar with so many sciences as the farmer? He must know something of chemistry in order to understand his soil; he must know something of physics to adjust properly the complex machinery and apparatus demanded on an up-to-date farm; he must know something of biology, including animal and plant breeding. All these sciences are progressive sciences, that is to say, men are constantly finding out new things in them and finding out things that have formerly been believed to be true are not. One has only to compare the agriculture of today with that of twenty years ago to prove the truth of this statement.

In addition to a knowledge of these sciences the farmer must understand business arithmetic. In no more law than is required in most firms of business, and besides being a scientific man must also be a good business man, understanding market conditions with reference to many commodities. He must be an able and practical man of affairs. Where is the man in any other calling in life, either in business or in the professions, of which such demands are made? It is on account of the very business of the proposition and the constantly changing conditions that the farmers need the help of the county agent. Nor is such an adviser an unheard of thing in other lines of business. Business houses pay large salaries to efficiency experts who come and tell them how to run their business in a much more handsomely than does the county agent.

One of these experts in one case watched a man laying brick and saw that if he handled the brick in another way much more could be accomplished. The change was made to the saving of the company of many dollars. Now it is not at all likely the expert could lay bricks as rapidly as the men whom he advised, nevertheless he is able to help them to more efficient work.

Reason for Interest.

"Why should the farmer be singled out as especially in need of advice?" It is because his problem is the largest. "Why should the Gazette, the city of Janesville and the Commercial club be so anxious to help the farmers?" Because upon the prosperity of the farmer depends the prosperity of the Gazette, the city of Janesville and the business interests of the men of the Commercial club.

Agriculture is the basis of the foundation of all prosperity in Rock county as elsewhere in the country. "If the agricultural experiment station is worth anything," says Mr. Alden, "the farmer gets out of the information he receives direct from that source." That is exactly what the county agent is for, to bring the farmer into communication with that information. "Besides," continues Mr. Alden, "any farmer can get all the information he needs from bulletins sent out by Uncle Sam."

Uncle Sam's headquarters are so far away he is hardly in a position to furnish every farmer in his vast domain all the information he may need, and as his bulletins are. To study them and adapt them to local conditions requires more time than is hardly in a position to give. The farmer is a practical man who works long hours of manual labor which in many cases means him for those study of books and bulletins. He can, however, appreciate practical demonstrations when brought to him.

Agent Does Not Dictate.

Says Mr. Alden again: "How should I tell a county agent come to me and tell me how I should build a new house or a pig pen, especially if the man knows less about the business than I did?" The county agent does not dictate or volunteer advice unasked and should he do so the farmer is under no obligations to follow his advice. It was the privilege of the writer a few months since to visit by invitation of the owner a farm on which a barn was being built. Very likely the owner was a more successful farmer than the writer would be should he turn his attention to the direction of the construction of the barn which the builder adopted and which saved some $200 in the cost of construction and made a more convenient barn. Why? Probably because it had been his good fortune to visit a number of good farms on many different farms, not only in Rock county but elsewhere in the state. Such work as this the county agent is able to do, in the nature of things the farmer must stay pretty close to his job. The county agent is able to bring to him the benefit of the experience of other men.

Cost Not Excessive.

And now a word as to the cost. Forty-four hundred dollars is the estimated cost instead of five thousand of this amount. The United States then pays $1,200. The state will pay $1,000 and the business men of Janesville and Beloit $1,000. How much does that leave for county tax? Just the $1,000 asked of the county. About half of this amount comes from the taxes in the cities of the county so we have left $600 to be raised by a tax on the farmers. With four thousand farms in the county the burden for each farm is not large, hardly worth talking about.

Of course, the $1,000 the state pays must come out of the taxes also, but if Rock county does not get the county agent some other county will get it and Rock county will be obliged to help foot the bill to the extent of her share in the $1,000 required of the state. Only a certain number of the counties of the state may have county agents, and only one other county will be added this year. Will it be Rock county or will it be some other county? The next county board meeting will decide this interesting question.

Something To Write About

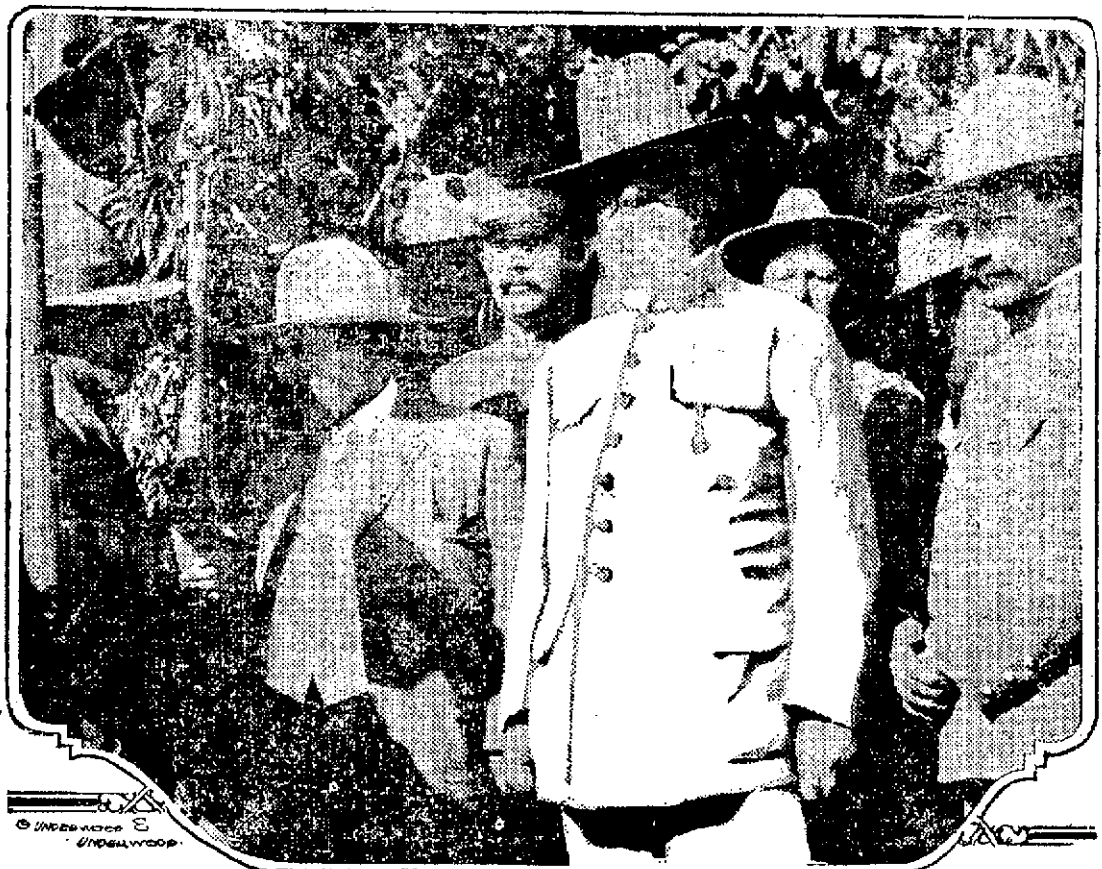

The Spotted Pig

They said that old Mother Goose had a son Jack—a fine-looking lad who was not very good nor yet very bad—and once upon a time he made what seemed a foolish bargain with a bag of bones. Now I don't know just how that came about nor what happened afterward, but it seems as though someone said something about a spotted pig, but I do know that before that little spotted pig died and became roast pork that some very wonderful things happened to him and to the boy who owned him. I moved away just after the boy and the pig began to be seen round where I lived so I never heard the rest of the story—but I know that somewhere in the world some boy or girl knows all about it, and I do wish they would tell me so I can sleep nights.

ANTIGO HIGH SCHOOL FIRETRAP IS BURNED

Fire During Night All That Saved Pupils From Death, Is the Claim.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Antigo, Wis., Jan. 6.—Following an explosion heard all over this city at 3 a. m. on Thursday, fire broke out in the high school here and destroyed the building. The fire department was hindered in its work by the cold. The thermometer registered 22 degrees below zero.

The building, which was valued at $70,000, exclusive of books and equipment, was a fire trap, according to underwriters. They said that it would have been impossible for all pupils to escape had the blaze occurred in the daytime.

Ice on Fire Escapes.

A fire drill was to have been held by the pupils on Wednesday, but because of the ice on fire escapes, it was abandoned. About 625 high school and grade students attended classes in the building.

Insurance on the structure amounted to $47,000, and $7,000 on equipment. Not an article was saved. Records of pupils, prizes and class requests were lost.

Strong Wind Fans.

A strong wind carried flaming shingles many blocks and it was with difficulty that the fire was kept from spreading. The home of former Congressman E. A. Morse caught fire, but the blaze was extinguished before it did much damage. Ice and snow on the roofs of buildings prevented the spread of the fire.

Three congregations on Thursday offered the use of their churches and basements to the school board to be used for classes. Other rooms are available in the city hall and courthouse.

The construction of a new building will be a serious problem as the city is now bonded almost to the limit.

NEW COUNTY AGENT FOR WALWORTH CO.

L. L. Oldham Appointed By Regents to Succeed J. H. Murphy Who Takes Position at Stock Farm.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Madison, Wis., Jan. 7.—L. L. Oldham has been appointed by the regents of the university as county agent for Walworth county. He succeeds J. H. Murphy, who resigned to act as manager of a large stock farm in the same county. Mr. Oldham has been employed in agricultural extension work for the Great Northern railway and later as manager of a large stock farm owned by James J. Hill. He is a native of Dane county, Wisconsin, and a graduate of the University of Wisconsin.

The position of county representative in Walworth county carries much responsibility, as this region is so well developed agriculturally.

Upon the recommendation of a committee representing the Sawyer county board, the regents named C. P. West as agricultural representative of that county. Mr. West has specialized in the marketing of farm crops, having visited Norway and Denmark for the purpose of studying methods of farming carried on in these countries.

BIDS FOR SUPPLYING OF SCHOOL BOOKS WILL BE OPENED BY BOARD

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Madison, Wis., Jan. 7.—Bids for supplying school library books under the so-called Township library law will be opened by the state library commission on February 18. The contract will be to supply the books for the biennial period beginning April 1, 1916. The law requires that each bidder shall make a deposit of $1,000 with the state treasurer as an evidence of good faith. The state library committee consists of the state superintendent, the secretary of the Free Library commission and the attorney-general. More than 80,000 volumes are purchased under the provisions of this law every year. The list of township library books has been prepared by O. S. Rice, supervisor of school libraries.

The Forgiveness of Sin

By REV. L. W. GOSNELL
Assistant to the Dean, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago

TEXT—Blessed is he whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered. Blessed is the man unto whom the Lord imputeth not iniquity, and in whose spirit there is no guile.—Psalm 32, 2.

Psalm 32 is supposed to have been written after the visit of Nathan to David. The guilty king has found pardon for his sin and here voices his gladness. In our text, three words are used to describe our offenses against God: "transgression," "sin," "iniquity." "Transgression" means rebellion against authority; "sin" is missing the mark, both of God's standard and our anticipations; "iniquity" is distortion, crookedness. Likewise, three words are used to describe God's gracious dealing with sin: it is "forgiven," "lifted up as a burden," "covered," and so hidden from sight; it is not "imputed," but canceled like a debt.

Men speak lightly of forgiveness until a deep sense of sin settles upon them, then they wonder whether their guilt may be put away; they no longer question the Bible teaching on the punishment of sin, but find it difficult to believe in its forgiveness. For such troubled souls we have good news.

To begin with, the Bible revelation of God is full of comfort for them. He is "the Lord God, merciful and gracious, long suffering and abundant in goodness and truth; keeping mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin." God was revealed in Jesus Christ, and we knew our Lord's attitude to the penitent during the days of his flesh. The woman who bathed his feet with tears, the shrinking adulteress, publicans and sinners, all attest that there is forgiveness with the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Peace Through the Cross. But it is at Calvary, especially, that assurance for the penitent is found. Such a soul will not be satisfied lightly. He demands that, for the awfulness of his sin, some awful reparation be made. But the cross fully meets this demand. God's Son, our substitute, holy and undefiled, hung there, and all God's waves and billows swept over him. Calvary tells of love, indeed, but it also tells of wrath, for the wrath of God against sin exhausted itself in the dark hour of the crucifixion. This is the meaning of the Savior's cry, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

That such provision has been made is further attested by the experience of men. Luther tells us that the pains of hell got hold upon him, but when he looked to the wounds of Christ he found peace. John Wesley, after seeking rest for his soul for years, trusted in Christ and felt his heart strangely warmed and assured. Spurgeon was so happy when he experienced forgiveness that he wanted to tell the crowds of the field about it. These men were not deluded; the experience of Luther led to the Reformation, that of Wesley to the Evangelical revival and that of Spurgeon to years of a fruitful ministry.

Sin Against the Holy Ghost.

But though so clearly attested, we occasionally meet one who declares this blessing is not for him, for he has committed the sin of which Christ said it "shall never be forgiven"—the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost. But what is this sin? As the result of careful study one writer gives this definition: "The blasphemous manifestation in word or deed of an internal state of soul to which a man has arrived by a continual resistance and increasing opposition to the clearest and most undoubted revelation of God's spirit; which state, when once attained, is one of contemptuous and malicious hatred of all that pertains to the Son of God and which, by its very nature, is bound to manifest itself as such." We never met a soul, troubled over this sin, who gave evidence of having descended to such depths of willful opposition to Christ. Indeed, one who has committed this sin will not be distressed over it, and the fact of distress is itself an encouragement. Over against all our fears stands the word of Christ, "Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out."

How we should love him who forgives so much! the psalmist says, "There is forgiveness with thee that thou mayest be feared." Fear here means reverent love. A story is told of General Havelock which illustrates this text. One of his soldiers violated regulations and continued to do so in spite of discipline. Someone asked the general if he had "tried forgiving" the offender, and the suggestion was acted upon. The soldier was sent for and came defiant, expecting another reprimand. He was surprised when his officer said, kindly: "Johnstone, I have determined in the queen's name to forgive you all these offenses." He went away a subdued and changed man and gave no further trouble.

Brief Missives. "If I had had more time," a witty Frenchman used to write, "I could have made this letter shorter." Voltaire is credited with two of the briefest on record. One said, "Atlas," and the other "Bravo." They were in recognition of a woman's bereavement and remarriage.

Pleasant Fields of Holy Writ

THE INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.
First Quarter: Lesson 11 Acts 11:1-13, January 9, 1916.
THE COMING OF THE HOLY SPIRIT.

Pentecost was the popular festival of the Hebrew Church. Its keynote was joyous. Its distinctive offering was the twin-loaves of bread, made from the new wheat of the harvest. It occurred at a period favorable for the largest attendance. There was a recess in farm toil, and the season was so propitious for travel that Jews of the dispersion came in large numbers. It is commonly believed that at this particular Pentecost there was an especially large attendance. The Hebrew world was more than usually expectant. Rumors of mighty deeds had spread afar. In an historic parenthesis, Luke catalogues the countries represented. What a territory! From Mesopotamia to Rome; from Asia Minor to the Lybian desert.

• • • • • The festive throng is far too large to be accommodated within the city walls. Gay turbans, bright balbrigs, hoods, and tents, have converted the hill-slopes into a vast and brilliant park. The festival morning meal is finished. The liveliness of the general converse is toned, perhaps, with an indescribable premonition of the coming great event. It is the very hour for the glad service to begin. All eyes in that vast theater of nature are turned to Herod's snowy temple, crested now with fire. Suddenly, a preternatural sound falls on every ear. In the awful roar of a cyclone. Yet one look is cast at that radiant sky for the funnel-shaped cloud of Hebrew itself is motionless. The audible symbol could not be more appropriate. It represents at once an invisible Presence, and an irresistible but not harmful power. • • • • • The dread report admits of localization. A vast throng is attracted there in an instant. Now the sound is matched by a preternatural sight. The long-lost Shekinah, indissolubly associated with every triumphant epoch of Hebrew history, appears again. Not now, however, as in former times, within the temple, but in a common home. As they look, a new and significant phase of the miracle appears. That celestial fire parts into many flames. One rests above each disciple's head. • • • • • A sign pregnant with meaning! Fire, the pure and purifying natural element, the warming and illuminating tongue, signifying that humanity is to be warmed, illuminated, and cleansed by the Spoken Word, the Gospel of the Kingdom of Heaven. • • • • • Now, there is a continuation, in articulate speech, of the miraculous manifestation in audible and visible form, which had preceded. In elevated and rapturous strains, like Moses' song of Mary's Magnificat, the inspired disciples celebrate the finished work of the Messiah. They yield themselves as instruments to the Holy Spirit, and are, perhaps, but semi-conscious of the words they utter. That polyglot audience listens to a many-tongued anthem, commemorating the high praises of the glorified Redeemer. To this ecstatic and poetic outburst, the deliberate, explanatory, and argumentative address of St. Peter presents the sharpest contrast! On that Old Dispensation harvest-home day, the first harvest of souls is reaped. The Gospel sickle in the hand of Peter, foremost apostle of the New Dispensation, "Three thousand souls are immediately baptized and received into the disciples' good fellowship. • • • • • Pentecost is the irrefragable seal to the ascension of Jesus. When the high priest went within the veil, though the people saw him not, they knew he was there by the sweet tinkling of the golden bells that fringed his robe. They were assured that he still lived and performed the holiest rites of their religion. So this preternatural sound, this dazzling sight, of Pentecost was the token by which the apostles knew, and all subsequent believers are assured, that the Eternal Priest of the universal heart, having passed within the veil, yet lives and sheds forth this which ye now see and hear." This is demonstrative evidence that God had raised him up and exalted him to the right hand, and had fulfilled to him the promised effusion of the Holy Ghost.

THE TEACHER'S LANTERN. The courage and persistence of the apostles in turning at Jerusalem is admirable. Like sheep in the midst of wolves, their Shepherd gone, they still held together, and were obedient to his last command. The glory of the ascension explains it. The expression "mighty rushing wind" has a new significance after one has heard a cyclone. Ten thousands of rocks, crashing and bounding on a stone more awful, could not make a sound more awful. All Jerusalem, and the region around, heard the signal which ushered in the New Dispensation. We are now living under a general and impersonal influence of God, expressed by the term Holy Spirit. We are living in the dispensation of a Person. The Spirit came not as a transient guest. He came to abide forever. His offices are to regenerate, witness, teach, help in prayer, etc. • • • • • The Divine Spirit was no new or late arrival in the world. He brooded over the primeval waters. He strove in the conscience of the earliest man. Patriarchs felt his imminence. By him also the prophets spoke. But it was in Jesus that the Holy Spirit had consummate revelation. In him the Spirit was in his fullness. The Spirit takes up the teaching of Jesus and carries it further and deeper. • • • • • Nothing could be more significant than the manner of the Spirit's coming. A hurricane without atmospheric disturbance, not horizontal as the ordinary wind but perpendicular, following the audible came the visible fire, the warming, cleansing, illuminating element. In shape of a tongue, signifying that humanity is to be warmed, cleansed, illuminated by spoken word. • • • • • The message was spoken to all the world that day without the apostles leaving Jerusalem for all the world was represented in that polyglot assembly.

"DEAD FLAT BROKE"

By BARBARA RHODES.

A young widow, left penniless by the death of her husband, Mrs. Burt had come into our little Bohemian community, timid but beautiful, unassuming but having the staying talent of a careful artist. She chanced to rent the studio and living room of apartments on the floor directly below that where I had been located for two years. She set at work bravely, greatly encouraged by the praise of old Tom Taylor, the dean of our little isolated community.

With the last days of autumn nearly every member of our group left the big chilly city for California. It was a pleasant begira, planned for ever since the preceding winter. To those who had been able to save up two hundred dollars, six months of useful sketch work amid an utter disdain for the usual grinding care of artist life, was guaranteed. Neither Mrs. Burt nor myself were among the lucky. We probably had less than a hundred dollars between us when hard, biting winter came on.

Then Helen—Mrs. Burt—became ill. She would not acknowledge it; she was not altogether incapacitated from work, but day by day she seemed to fade. I was shocked when I learned from the lady who sublet the apartments that she was in dire distress. "It's food she needs, and rest, and care," the good woman advised, and she gave me some details of the deprivations of mother and child that saddened and then aroused me.

From the first the little one had taken to me. From the first Mrs. Burt had shown a confiding friendliness that made me proud. I loved her, but I never allowed her to suspect it. I laughed, too, at the thought of myself, practically a pauper, offering to take on a new responsibility.

I did go to Mrs. Burt and set before her the grim condition of our mutual unfortunate environment in plain, naked fact. I treated it, however, as transient, common to the artistic lot, an experience to be considered lightly. "Better days would come."

My assumed cheerfulness raised her spirits, but only for a time. She confessed that she was at her last resource. She asked me to take one of her finished pictures and borrow on it. If I could not sell it, I stored it away in my own room and brought her some money from a fictitious money lender. Thus with the other three pictures, and I found myself flat broke.

I shall never forget the evening when I wandered forth from my room in search of food for Helen and the little one. I was desperate. We could no longer expect the landlady to bear the burden of our delinquent room rent. She was wretchedly poor, with few applications for the rooms our journeying associates had abandoned.

You who have never been at the point where utter isolation from friends, gnawing hunger, pennilessness, cold, helplessness, have massed up like grim giants, crushing you, overpowering you, can never realize the black despair of my situation at that crisis hour of my life. I staggered along the street like one distracted as I thought of Helen and her child. I was seized with the impulse to smash in a window filled with costly gems and run for my life.

I saw a poorly, well-dressed man leisurely approaching me. He was smoking a cigar, at peace with all the world, warm, well fed, rich. I held out my hand for a pittance. With a growl he swept me out of his path. I turned down an obscure alley, ashamed of my mendicant act. My foot slipped on the icy pave as it kicked and then stepped on some obstructing object. I lifted it up—a pocketbook.

I opened it with trembling hands and starting eyes. I thrilled. I shouted, I babbled riotously as I drew forth a ten-dollar bill. Inside of it was folded a strip of paper, but that I thrust recklessly into my pocket. It was as I reached my own room again that I chanced to take out the slip of paper that had been inclosed. I started as I read: "Funder: For the sake of humanity take this note to the police at once. Room with the red curtain, fourth story. In deadly peril."

I did not go to the police. Only half comprehending the situation, I hastened back to the spot where I had found the pocketbook. I scanned the building backing upon the alley. "Fourth story—red curtain"—I made out the spot against the light in a room beyond. I climbed up a fire escape running beside the window with the red curtain.

The window was slightly raised, the curtain dapped aside. I saw a man lying chained to a bed. Within five minutes I learned that he was the captive of a set of desperadoes holding him for a ransom. Within five more I had him free of his bonds and down to the street.

Then the police. He was a wealthy man. His gratitude resulted in a liberal purchase of pictures, his influence brought me a new clientele.

Need I tell the outcome? With prosperity there came restored health to Helen. She cried when I told her of that eventful night when I was "flat broke." Her emotion carried that lovely face close to my own. We were betrothed. (Copyright, 1915, by W. C. Chapman.)

To Remove Mildew From Linen. Mix soft soap and powdered starch, half as much salt, and juice of one lemon. Rub the linen well in this solution and let it lie on the grass for a day and night. This treatment will remove mildew stains without harming the finest linen.

WOMEN OF TWO CONTINENTS TO SPREAD PAN-AMERICAN GOSPEL

Left to right: Mrs. Robert Lansing, Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker and Mme. Eduardo Suarez.

The wives, sisters and daughters of the delegates to the second Pan-American Scientific Congress in Washington have formed a woman's auxiliary and the opening meetings have been filled with enthusiasm. Mrs. Robert Lansing, wife of the secretary of state; Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker, president of the American Federation of Women's Clubs; Mme. Eduardo Suarez, wife of the Chilean ambassador to the United States, and other representative women from two continents have been named on a committee which will spread the gospel of co-operation among the women of the Americas.

There is no Room in the World for the Man who only Guesses -- YOU MUST KNOW.

MEN who work with their hands and muscles are struggling at a big disadvantage. The world doesn't care so much how much you can lift while "on the job"—it is how much do you know? Suppose a man should pop around the corner and say to you, "who is the representative from your district"? Could you answer him?

You may be as poor as a church-mouse in money but rich in knowledge. You may be able to answer a fund of inquiries—you may be looked upon as a wise man of your neighborhood, and if that is so then you are also rich in a number of real friends.

The man who knows is welcomed everywhere—he attracts people to him—folks like to have dealings with the intelligent man—

Are You that Man?

For instance: what do you know about the Republic of Mexico—its agriculture—area—and population—capital—commerce—debt—education—finance—government—judicature—history—language—its mines and minerals—its monetary system—its production and industry—its towns—states—capitals—weights—measures—currency?

Can you give facts about this one question (alone) of the day? Can you converse intelligently about Mexico's present and past difficulties?

Can you give the important facts about your own state or any other state in the Union? Have you reliable books that will give such information?

Can you refer to any books in your library and know the world's production in hops—fire insurance statistics—fire losses—in these United States?

Do they give you facts in general about the earth?

To put it in another way—what do you know about

Electrical Measures;
Number of Evangelists;
Expenditure of U. S.
Farm statistics.
Farmers table;
Ice yachting records;

Number of Jacobites;
Number of people in any given religious sect?
Horse power developed in U. S.
Horse racing records;
Mercantile Marine
Eight hour laws?

Where is Devil's Tower—Red River—Muscat—Montezuma Castle—Muir Woods?

What mountains are the highest—or rivers the longest—or lakes the widest—or national monuments the tallest?

Who are the representatives—what are the retail prices of foods—the U. S. Postal Laws?

What are the President's powers—what is his constitutional position—how is he elected—his residence and rules and salary?

These are but a few of the subjects covered in

The Gazette Almanac and Encyclopedia

FOR 1916

This big 600 to 700 page book is the most remarkable wonder book ever offered in any city by any house. It contains more concise information about the Government, Finances, Population, Trade, Communications, General Statistics of the United States and every country of the world that has ever been published.

More than 9,000 Subjects Indexed

It is the combined efforts of the best editors, statisticians, and experts in Almanac and Encyclopedia compiling in the U. S. It is absolutely accurate—authoritative—and correct.

There is no other work its equal in America. In fact, no other work that compares with it.

We want every man—every woman—and particularly every child to have a copy of this book.

We know that no work you may now own will be of half the value to you that this book will prove to be. It will settle all arguments—it will materially aid the boy or girl in his or her studies.

NEVER BEFORE HAS SUCH A BOOK BEEN OFFERED ON THESE TERMS

To produce this work has cost thousands of dollars. Its wide scope and absolute accuracy proves itself to have taken a long time and to have been very costly. By a very special arrangement with the publishers we have secured A LIMITED NUMBER.

This means exactly what it says—a limited number only. When these are distributed it will positively be impossible for us to procure more.

In the opinion of college, professional, and business men who have examined the Almanac—men in all classes of life—this work stands unique and alone—the most remarkable work of its kind ever issued.

Don't you want to know? Don't you want a reliable source of information—ever ready knowledge—easy accessible through the common sense index?

Surely you will take advantage of our offer immediately.

Goethe's Wisdom.

I respect the man who knows distinctly what he wishes. The greater part of all the mischief in the world arises from the fact that men do not sufficiently understand their own aims. They have undertaken to build a tower, and spend no more labor on the foundation than would be necessary to erect a hut.—Goethe.

LEVY'S

All the Original Tickets Will Be Left On All Merchandise So You Can Make Comparative Prices.

The policy of this store is not to carry over any merchandise from one season to another. While it is true that we have no undesirable merchandise to offer you, our stock being entirely new, bought during the past few months, we consider it far better to clean it all up, at a low price, than it is to carry over from one season to another. By this up-to-date method you can buy with the greatest of confidence and feel assured that you are always getting fresh, new goods. These prices that we are offering you are without a doubt the lowest you have ever seen in Janesville before for new, up-to-date merchandise.

Semi-Annual $17.75 Sale

Men's and Young Men's Suits and Overcoats, $25.00, $27.50 and $30.00 Values

$17.75

It has been our custom for years at the end of each season to take our entire stock of Men's and Young Men's Suits and Overcoats from our higher priced lines and mark them down to $17.75. We do this to reduce our stock and this opportunity to buy the best clothing made at only $17.75 is therefore but twice yearly. Every Suit and Overcoat in this tremendous reduction sale is the very best The Golden Eagle could secure to sell at regular prices, $25.00, $27.50 and $30.00. The identical garments we have been selling all season at these higher prices. $17.75 for clothing of this character in the face of scarcity of dye materials and the increased cost of woollens makes it the biggest saving in the history of clothes buying. Early selection is urged while assortments are varied and complete. Stein-Bloch, Highest grade Society Brand Suits and Overcoats
